Queen's aide Russian spy

BLUNT
. . . stripped of knighthood

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament today that Sir Anthony Blunt, a former aide to Queen Elizabeth, has admitted spying for the Soviet Union.

Blunt helped British diplomats Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess to defect to the Soviet Union in 1951, Mrs. Thatcher said.

While working for the British intelligence service, he regularly passed information to the Russians, she told an amazed House of Commons.

And while he was a professor at Cambridge University, he recruited young talent for the Russians, she said.

Buckingham Palace announced simultaneously that Blunt has been stripped of his knighthood.

Blunt, 72, had served as surveyor and then adviser for the Queen's pictures since 1952. A highly distinguished academician, his posts have included professor of art history at the University of London and director of the Courtauld Institute of Art.

Mrs. Thatcher's statement identified Blunt — educated at Marlborough and Trinity College, Cambridge, and regarded as one of the most brilliant men of his generation — as the mysterious "fourth man" in the Burgess-Maclean scandal.

The third man was previously identified as Harold (Kim) Philby, who defected to Moscow in 1963. Philby, too, has been linked with Blunt, Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons.

Speculation has been rife for years on the identity of the academic who recruited clever young men studying at Cambridge University, clearly destined for the higher echelons of the British establishment, and enrolled them as secret agents for the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Thatcher said in her statement:

"In April, 1964, Sir Anthony Blunt admitted to the (British) security authorities that he had been recruited by and had acted as a talent spotter for Russian intelligence before the (Second World) War, when he was a don at Cambridge, and had passed information regularly to the Russians while he was a member of the security service between 1940 and 1945.

"He made this admission after being given an undertaking that he would not be

Some U.S. hostages to be freed: network

Times News Services

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran's foreign minister said today that all hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran except white American males will be freed "very soon," CBS News reported from the Iranian capital.

The network said Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr told CBS correspondent Randy Daniels in an interview that "all women and blacks would be freed very soon."

But Bani Sadr did not say exactly when this will take place, Daniels reported.

Earlier, Iran notified at least two U.S. oil companies that it would no longer sell oil to them and industry analysts said the cutoff apparently applies to all U.S. oil companies.

The action means that U.S. companies will no longer be able to buy Iranian oil for sale to third countries.

President Carter on Tuesday banned the import of Iranian oil to the United States, but the U.S. oil companies had hoped they could continue to take Iranian oil under their contracts and market it outside the U.S.

The Arab League's council of ministers rejected a Libyan demand for joint Arab reprisals against the U.S. for freezing Iranian assets in U.S. banks.

Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Triki told the council the U.S. action was a "very serious provocation" of all the oil-producing countries and called for "immediate and effective counter-measures in solidarity with the Iranian revolution."

Triki did not spell out the political, diplomatic and economic reprisals he had in mind, but presumably they might have included an Arab oil embargo and economic boycott against the U.S. and a break in diplomatic relations.

Iran, which is Moslem but non-Arab, is not a member of the Arab League. But it has called on Moslem countries, particularly the Arab oil producers, to back it in its dispute with the United States over the U.S. embassy seizure in Tehran.

In Washington, the Pentagon anounced Defence Secretary Harold Brown is reviewing the status of 273 Iranian military personnel being trained in the United States as pilots, navigators and mechanics.

In Tehran, students holding the hostages seized a three-member NBC-TV film crew and held them for several hours inside the compound, a spokesman for the students said.

Meanwhile, in other developments:

—The dollar dropped on nearly all major European money markets today.

—The price of gold dropped in both Zurich and London, opening the day at $388 in Zurich after Wednesday's close of $390 and at $387.50 in London.

—Doctors treating the deposed shah in New York believe the exiled monarch could be discharged from hospital in about a week without risking his life. NBC, meanwhile, reported he would be returned to Mexico within 10 days.

Bank rate stunner

LONDON (Reuter) — The Bank of England today raised its minimum lending rate — the interest rate on money loaned to banks — by a stunning three points to a record 17 per cent.

This is two per cent higher than the previous record rate of 15 per cent imposed during the crisis in October, 1976, when the British pound was plunging on foreign exchange markets.

The pound rallied on news of the increase, rising to $2.1333 in U.S. funds from $2.1160.

Firemen suck in acid

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Eight firemen went to hospital early today after they sucked in a mouthful of hydrochloric acid lying in a pocket 60 metres from a derailed tanker leaking chlorine.

The firemen, not wearing gas masks, were examined by a doctor at the site who recommended they go to hospital as a precaution.

A Peel Regional Police spokesman said the winds, which had shifted during the night, were of low velocity and it was improbable the gas would reach Toronto.

Tired and frustrated crews continued to work to patch the tanker, which erupted twice Wednesday, sending hydrochloric acid into the air and workers scrambling.

Evacuation centres were beginning to close as people returned to their homes or moved into hotels paid for by CP Rail, owner of the train.

Meanwhile, there was apparent confusion among CP Rail officials over compensation to evacuees as a result of the mishap.

The railway said Monday that evacuees could go to special claim centres to be reimbursed for out-of-pocket expenses. William Stinson, CP Rail's executive vice-president, said recipients must sign a waiver, freeing the company of future liability.

Company PR officials corrected their boss Wednesday, saying it was a receipt, not a waiver, but a claims manager said the company hadn't decided.

Que. landslide elates Liberals

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Quebec Liberals say they are ready to fight a general election after winning massive majorities in three provincial by-elections Wednesday.

The Liberals won more than 60 per cent of the vote in two ridings formerly held by the Parti Quebecois — Maisonneuve in east-end Montreal and Prevost, north of Montreal.

They also captured the rural riding of Beauce-Sud, formerly held by Fabien Roy, who jumped to federal politics last year.

Liberals were elated at the victory in Maisonneuve, previously considered the safest PQ seat in Quebec.

Liberal Leader Claude Ryan said he will consider whether to issue a formal call for a general election within the next few days.

In the Beauce-Sud riding, southeast of Quebec City, the Liberal candidate Hermann Mathieu, a 43-year-old notary, won by more than 2,000 votes over industrialist Raymond Boisvert of the PQ.

In Prevost, the Liberals elected broadcaster Solange Chaput-Rolland, a former member of the task force on Canadian unity. She defeated PQ economist Pierre Harvey, a close associate of Premier Levesque.

Liberal organizers attributed their overwhelming victory to the rash of public sector strikes threatening the province and to the government's recently released white paper on sovereignty-association.

The results mean the PQ government has now lost all six by-elections since it was elected in 1976.

Standings in the national assembly now are: PQ 68, Liberals 29, Union Nationale 9, Independents 2, Democrats 1 and one vacant.

Ford car loss may hit $1B

DETROIT (AP) — A top Ford Motor Co. executive is predicting a $1-billion loss on car and truck production in the United States and Canada this year and perhaps next year as well. But he added the No. 2 U.S. automaker is expected to show an over-all profit.

The loss is about what Chrysler Corp. was predicting for its over-all results before the fall sales slump. But Ford executives insist they are not following Chrysler into financial peril.

The prediction was contained in a memo written Nov. 1 by William Bourke, executive vice-president in charge of North American automotive operations. Ford officials confirmed the contents of the memo after it was reported in several publications.

Ford reported a loss of $305 million on North American operations of all kinds for the third quarter. That lumped results from the company's steel, glass, tractor and aerospace businesses and motor vehicle financing in with cars and trucks. Profits overseas and a change in British tax laws enabled Ford to report an over-all profit of $103 million for the quarter.

Where's our preem? Bennett's gone missing

By JAKE BANKY

Lost, stolen or strayed, Premier William Richards Bennett seems to have been mislaid.

On a working holiday "somewhere in California," Bennett has dropped completely out of sight. His own office has no idea how to reach him and Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy is equally in the dark.

In case of an emergency, the premier's staff would have to wait for him to phone in.

"This is not a normal situation. He does not normally go away and not tell us where he is," Nina Gray, Bennett's executive secretary said today.

"It's very difficult to understand," said NDP Leader Dave Barrett, who declined further comment.

Bennett left the energy summit in Ottawa Monday and flew to Los Angeles accompanied only by his secretary Hall Leiren. Tuesday, he attended a lunch at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles given by B.C. Tourism officials. Since then, his exact whereabouts have been unknown.

It is believed the premier is vacationing in Palm Springs, a favorite vacation area for the premier and his late father, former premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Prime Minister Joe Clark had hoped to meet with Bennett in Saskatoon Wednesday to discuss oil prices.

Bennett telephoned his office yesterday morning, but did not say where he could be reached. He was expected to call back yesterday afternoon, but did not. By noon today, the premier had still not phoned back.

Assistant press secretary Jane Burnes says the premier's staff will pass on messages when and if Bennett phones again.

The working holiday is designed to give Bennett time to contemplate his cabinet changes. He is due back in Victoria Wednesday, two days before he announces his new cabinet lineup.

While the premier is in California, the political pot at home continues to boil over, fueled by the continuing "lettergate" scandal. Bennett may be in the sun, but for the moment at least, he is out of the heat.

Meanwhile, the man who says he should bear all the blame for the dirty tricks scandal says he hopes to stay in politics with the Social Credit party.

"I will be discussing my immediate future with Mrs. McCarthy," George Lenko said after submitting his resignation as executive assistant to the human resources minister Wednesday.

"But I intend to continue working in the political field and hopefully for the party."

Lenko, in quitting, accepted full responsibility for the dirty tricks scandal which has rocked the Socreds for close to two months.

McCarthy said she had discussed Lenko's role in the scandal and had been unable to dissuade him from resigning.

She said she had not asked for his resignation and had accepted it "with great regret".

Lenko said his failing was that he was not diligent in scrutinizing tapes on which Socred caucus workers advocated dirty tricks.

"Perhaps I could have taken action, but time and circumstances obscured this judgment and now others are being blamed."

Lenko is the third party worker to quit in the scandal which involved party members using false names in sending letters supporting Social Credit to editors of newspapers before last May's provincial election.

Lenko shouldered all the blame for organizing a seminar last fall at which party researchers Jack Kelly and Ellen MacKay advocated the political dirty tricks.

He said he also prepared tapes of the seminar and distributed them to constituency presidents.

There was no one else involved, Lenko said Wednesday.

The dirty trick campaign is the subject of a province-wide police investigation.

Kelly and Ron Greig, an assistant to Dave Brown, Bennett's communications adviser, have resigned. Miss MacKay refused to accept a one-month suspension and reprimand, arguing her remarks had been authorized by higher party officials. She is back at work after a holiday.

It was the second time Bennett has been out of the country when developments occurred in the scandal.

Election is well in hand

The four candidates for mayor in Victoria have been revealed as members of the Black Hand society.

But not to worry. There's no chance of the city getting a Godfather in the Nov. 17 municipal election.

Pastor Julian North of the First Spiritualist Church — a psychic cleric whose usual chore is handling services at his church at 819 Fort — went around to the four men who would be mayor and asked for palm prints.

The idea: To give the public a reading on the personalities and traits of the four candidates.

The results:

Bill Tindall — "Dapper Dan Tindall, where not a line, mount or cuticle is out of place.

"He has an easygoing nature but not at the expense of his organizing ability.

"He reassures his reasoning power by the book of caution and common sense.

"Bill has the patience of a mediator who reserves judgment until both sides are heard."

Murray Glazier — "Murray can get things organized but can also be a nail biter, as a result he becomes an isolationist, oftentimes spending long hours doing the job himself to make sure it gets done the way he wants it.

"Although he is a realist, had he lived in another century, he may have pursued a career in religion rather than in politics.

Dave Borgstrom — "Dave is a bit of a saint, bit of a devil and a bit of a promoter.

"Although he makes demands upon himself, he also expects others to follow suit. He is almost reckless with optimism, like Don Quixote fighting against insurmountable odds.

"He has an easygoing nature with plenty of gab, determination and courage, and is looking for a lucky break in life."

John Hayes — "John is a realist with a romantic flair. At times he feels he must isolate himself from the mundane and reinforce his energies with music and nature.

"Although he is sensitive and cares for people, especially the underdog, he has a tendency to be influenced by them, even though it was in the direction he wanted to go himself.

"This very flexible nature could bring him success."

Now before all this is rejected as psychic mumbo jumbo, it should be noted that the palm-reading pastor tried very hard to keep his psychic readings out of the foregoing.

Possible proof of that contention was North's request that the word "fretful" be deleted from Glazier's reading.

"That could be more of an opinion," North admitted, explaining that he couldn't justify using the word just from Glazier's palm print.

But palm readings, North insists, can be measured, monitored and categorized scientifically.

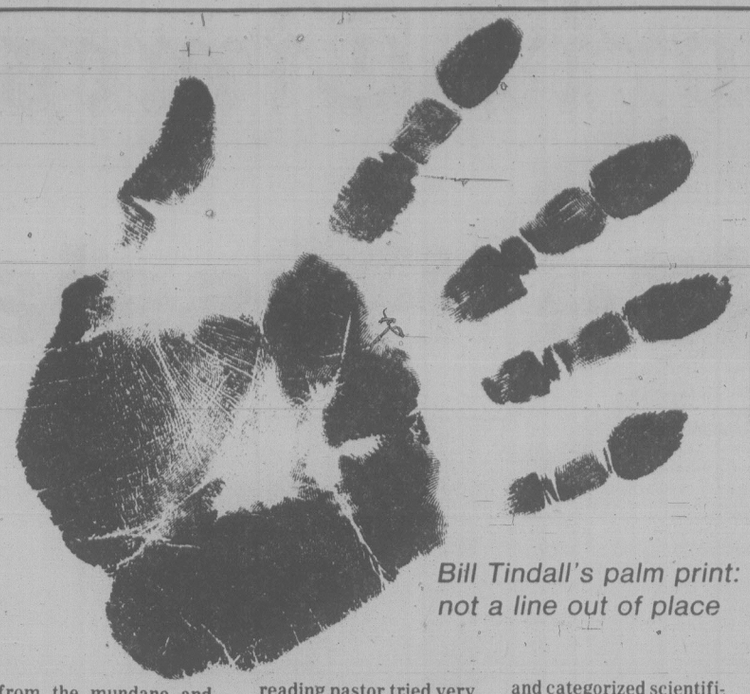

Who's going to win come election day?

"God never put a single line that is negative in a person's hand, so all candidates have an equal chance," North says cannily.

North did agree to drop off his psychic selections about the elections at the Times office.

They'll be in a sealed envelope, to be opened after the polls close.

Trudeau danced up storm

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau said Wednesday that the British Columbia Liberal caucus is not insulted by his appearance at a New York disco Saturday after he declined to attend a B.C. party session the same day.

"It's just the press is mixing that up," Trudeau mumbled when questioned on Parliament Hill about the incident. "I don't think they're upset...oh no, they're not crazy."

Trudeau was photographed at a New York disco on the weekend after saying he was too ill to attend a meeting of B.C. Liberals.

Some Liberals are not taking the incident lightly, although there was some lighthearted comment on the matter in the Commons.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent suggested during question period that Trudeau had used "New York disco dancing as a way of curing a bad cold" and suggested other politicians should be able to calculate costs of similar trips as tax-deductible medical expenses.

Art Phillips, the former mayor of Vancouver and now Liberal MP for Vancouver Centre said Trudeau could patch things up by making another trip to British Columbia.

Earthquake toll in Iran may top 500

Times News Services

Relief officials said today the death toll in a powerful earthquake that rocked rural northeastern Iran Wednesday will go much higher than the 500 originally predicted.

The quake was the most serious since a Sept. 16, 1978, earthquake killed 16,000.

Relief officials feared the number of dead would exceed 600 and said hundreds were injured during the catastrophe.

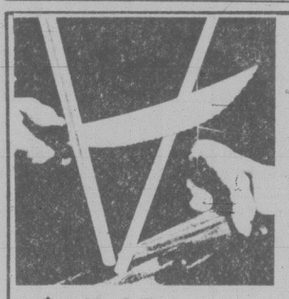

An air force spokesman said helicopters and C-130 Hercules transport planes were taking tents and blankets to elevated areas outside the ravaged hamlets.

At the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, students holding hostages turned their attention to collecting relief items for the quake victims. Piles of blankets, clothing and food items were collected at the southern gate within hours.

An earthquake also shook the Ferghana mountains in the republic of Kirghizia in Soviet central Asia today, Tass news agency reported.

Seismologists reported the jolt was measured at forces ranging from 3 to 5 on the Soviet 12-point scale of intesity. Tass said the quake caused no casualties or damage.

Weather map unavailable today

The ridge of high pressure which has resided over B.C. for the last week or so is continuing to slide eastward. This will allow a series of Pacific fronts to cross the province in the next few days. The first of these crossed the north coast overnight and will cross the south coast later today accompanied by a few showers. Little precipitation is expected at first through the interior. The major effect expected through Friday is a general clearing of low cloud which has plugged some southern B.C. valleys.

Fraser shakes

A moderate earthquake shook the lower Fraser Valley shortly after 8 a.m. today.

Dr. Roy Hyndman of the Pacific Geoscience Centre said the quake measured 3.25 on the Richter scale and was centred in the Mission City area. He said it was a fairly small quake, and would be most unusual if it caused any damage.

There have been no reports of injury or damage.

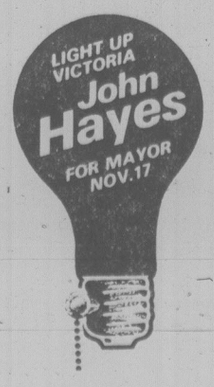

Last week, an earthquake measuring 3.75 was felt throughout the upper Cowichan Lake area.

A police spokesman said there have been four recent incidents near the Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Two of the incidents saw women lose their purses while the other two attempts failed.

Natives denied BCRIC?

KLEMTU (CP) — Native Indians in this remote south-coast community say they didn't get a chance to apply for the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. shares.

Thirteen students of an academic upgrading class have written to New Democratic Party MLA Graham Lea asking him to bring it to the attention of the government.

They also wonder how many other people in other isolated communities were left out of the share distribution. Eligible British Columbians were invited to apply for five free shares in the corporation.

The letter to Lea says there is no bank in the community of almost 300 people and there was no way for residents to get application forms.

UBC prof still cooling heels in Paris custody

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A lawyer for University of British Columbia professor Cyril Belshaw, sought by Swiss police for questioning in connection with his wife's death, said Wednesday his client was still in custody in Paris.

Lawyer Harry McLaughlin said the warrant for Belshaw's arrest was issued Nov. 9 by Swiss authorities. The professor was arrested two days later when he stepped off a plane in Paris on his way to an academic conference.

The decapitated body of Belshaw's wife Betty, 59, was found March 28 near the town of Aigle, Switzerland.

McLaughlin said Belshaw had answered all questions put to him by Swiss police and he had no reason to believe they wanted to question him further.

McLaughlin said French police were detaining Belshaw for questioning and that he had not been charged by Swiss police with the murder of his wife.

Under French law, McLaughlin said, a person can be extradited to another country even if there are no charges waiting for him there.

Belshaw has retained a French lawyer, McLaughlin said. "I don't know if I'll be entitled to speak directly to (Belshaw)," McLaughlin added.

Belshaw told friends he last saw his wife Jan. 20, boarding a subway in Paris. Her body was found wrapped in garbage bags March 28, but not identified until September.

'Honey' may have to explain to hubby

LANGLEY (CP) — A woman in this Fraser Valley community might have some explaining to do to her husband.

The woman, known only as Honey, started a ruckus last week when people attending a political rally found notes stuck to their windshield wipers saying "Honey, please call me at 856-2327."

The voters who jammed the phone lines for hours, heard a tape recording of a woman's husky voice saying, "Thanks for calling Honey. Just wanted to remind you of the upcoming municipal election Nov. 17 and to vote for two friends of mine, Grev Edgelow and Don McTavish. Pass it on. Thanks for calling."

After a call from a churchgoer who objected to the sexy voice and several complaints to the RCMP from political opponents, the two men replaced Honey with a recording of a man's voice "respectfully asking" voters to elect McTavish and Edgelow.

But, apparently someone recognized Honey's voice, and former mayor George Driediger said her real telephone number might be given out at a rally Monday night.

"I will release her phone number and maybe she can explain to her husband when she gets phone calls in the middle of the night."

Inquiry told of spilled tailings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mine tailings ponds in British Columbia have failed six times in the last 10 years and spilled millions of gallons of wastes, says a brief prepared by the provincial mines ministry.

The brief, to be presented at hearings of the provincial royal commission into uranium mining, says the worst failure occurred in 1969 at a mine near Greenwood in southcentral B.C. owned by Phoenix Copper Ltd. The dam sprung a leak and about 10 million gallons of tailings escaped, the ministry said.

The other failures involved tailings ponds or dams at mines owned by Endako Mines Ltd., Giant Mascot Mines Ltd., Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd., Consolidated Churchill Copper Corp. Ltd. and Brenda Mines Ltd.

The most recent failure was in 1976 at a Brenda operation when 3,000 gallons of tailings escaped from a dam during spring runoff.

The royal commission heard testimony about dam failures Wednesday in a paper presented by Elio D'Appolonia, head of a Pittsburgh consulting engineering company which specializes in dam construction.

D'Appolonia said that uranium tailings impoundments — usually some form of pond and dam — fail far more often than water storage dams.

He said there is one failure or leak for every 1,000 to 2,000 years of operation for water storage dams, but there is one incident for every 40 years of operation for uranium tailings ponds.

He said tailings ponds fail more often than water dams because ponds built to extremely stringent design standards are often viewed as a cost liability by some mining companies. Uranium tailings impoundments are considered to be a non-productive cost, D'Appolonia said.

Penitentiary probe urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP has called for an investigation of the administration of the British Columbia region of the federal penitentiary service, saying it cannot handle violence in prisons.

Benno Friesen of Surrey-White Rock-North Delta also said that asking that administration to investigate a prison disturbance is like asking a rabbit to carry lettuce or asking the Mafia to study violence, or asking the Ku Klux Klan to determine whether there is racism in its own organization.

The administration would whitewash itself and a thorough housecleaning was necessary.

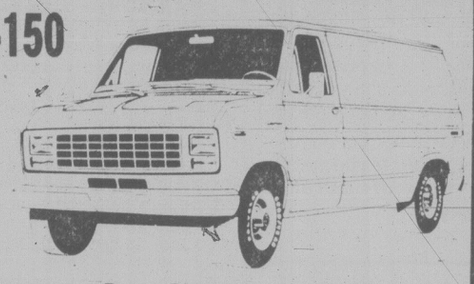

He was speaking of the Oct. 28 disturbance at Kent prison — so-called Hilton of B.C. penitentiaries — at which between $25,000 and $35,000 in damage was done.

He said the B.C. administration practises the reverse merit principle under which it gets rid of young officers while protecting its own hide.

Bob Jarvis of Willowdale, Ont., parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshsyn, told Freisen that not all the 65 prisoners at Kent were involved in the fracas. He added that the inspector-general of the penitentiary service conducted an investigation.

Vocational instructors vote strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Instructors at Pacific Vocational Institute voted 90 per cent in favor of striking Wednesday and will be in a legal position to walk out Monday, said John Fryer, general secretary of the British Columbia Government Employees Union.

"Local 57's bargaining committee had reached agreement with management on Oct. 4 and shook hands on it," Fryer said. "The tentative agreement was then sent out to the membership. Before the ratification process was completed, PVI principal Henry Justesen reneged."

Times Handicap '79, Part III

Featured today in the Times' Handicaps are the contenders for the Saanich Aldermanic Purse and the much-prized Saanich Mayoralty Stakes. Again, the handicap does not consist of predictions of winners but rather of a rough ordering of the candidates in order of merit as we perceive them.

The Saanich Aldermanic Purse has drawn a big field this year — 11 candidates vying for four available seats on council. Among them are two incumbents, a former Saanich mayor, a former alderman attempting a comeback, several who have made previous attempts in the race and a couple of fresh faces.

The Mayoralty Stakes:

Mel Couvelier — Couvelier won the mayoralty stakes two years ago and has done a better than adequate job since. Although council has still frequently been embattled and embittered, some progress has been made towards developing a comprehensive plan for Saanich's future. Couvelier has alienated some ratepayers groups with his strong support for commercial and industrial development, but has won approval from other voters for the same reason.

Keith MacGregor — It is hard for a complete unknown to challenge a sitting mayor successfully unless the incumbent is a disaster. Couvelier isn't, and that leaves MacGregor in a difficult position. He shows signs of good potential, has a clear and detailed understanding of Saanich's problems, and has a good background in the military, but that just isn't enough to justify a change from a competent mayor.

The aldermanic race field shapes up like this:

Howard Sturrock — Sturrock should walk away with this race. In his two years on council, he has shown himself to be one of the all-round best aldermen in all Greater Victoria. Thorough, conscientious, bright, articulate, and flexible.

Robert Cameron — Cameron, trying for a return to council after a year away, is easily the best of the others. He was a very good alderman during his time on council, tempering his firm defences of neighborhoods and communities with wit and good humor.

Muriel Overgaard — After the top two, the race gets much closer. Overgaard has a little experience in the political arena and has shown that she can handle a public forum well. She will have to learn about Saanich issues and problems, but shows potential to be an asset to council.

Hal Knight — If anything can be said for perseverence, then Knight has shown one worthy attribute. His attendance record as an observer at council meetings over the past year has been almost as good as the aldermen themselves. That dedication coupled with his experience as a school board trustee makes him a candidate worthy of consideration.

Ed Lum — Lum had many troubles during his last years as Saanich mayor but the knowledge he gained during that time may make him a valuable alderman. He will have to learn, however, to work on council without becoming involved in ideological battles, and should also moderate his growth-at-any-cost philosophy.

Geoff Vantreight — Vantreight's first two years on council have not been particularly auspicious for him. The unfortunate incident of the Panama Flats drainage basin, the stories of his "spying" on municipal employees, and several other cases of foot-in-mouth disease have gone some ways towards damaging his credibility.

Robert Bowcott — Taking a second run at an aldermanic seat, Bowcott has at least come up with a novel plan to attempt overcoming the antagonism that often exists between council and ratepayers groups. A committee of council to meet regularly with the municipality's 11 citizen organizations could prove to be one of the best election promises this year. However, only time will tell if Bowcott has the force to put his views across.

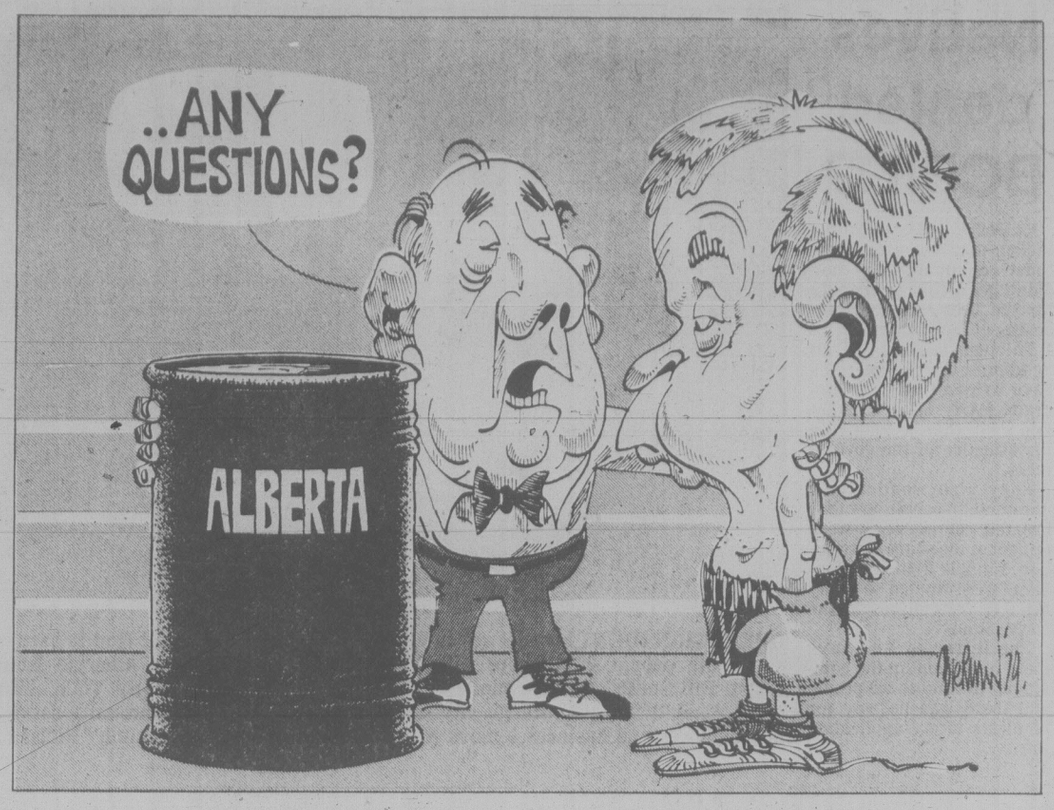

Judy Nyquist — A candidate has to offer the voting public more that what he/she feels are his/her credentials to make a good alderman. Nyquist has gone to great lengths to detail her involvement in many projects to help the handicapped and underprivileged. But bridging the gap between being a model volunteer and a competent alderman is not easy.

Jock MacGregor — No relation to the mayoralty candidate of the same name, this MacGregor seems to be even more of an unknown. He just hasn't been able to get across his specific platform.

Don Smith — Smith first came to the municipal scene from a Blenkinsop Valley ratepayers' group which appeared to have as its main objective the carving up of the valley into subdivisions. Anyone with such an objective is out of touch with the general mood of Saanich.

Kim Geddes — Geddes is the youngest candidate and is wearing his inexperience on his sleeve. By simply extolling such motherhood issues as quality of life and sensible planning and by suggesting that a university degree should somehow qualify a person for alderman, Geddes has shown that he has a fair way to go before being ready to hold office.

Better news

Like an automaton, I grabbed my 11:00 p.m. coffee to watch the National News on TV. Once again I hear the terribly grave voice of the newscaster tell me how we're headed for a depression, recession, surge in home heating oil, shortage of gasoline — impending, or, pill of pills, French/English separatism.

Lord, I was literally hammered down, down, down into my easy chair by the devastating news, that, by the end of the newscast, my nose was quivering with fear as it hung over the edge of the armrest, much like a dire-stricken cartoon character.

Trudging morosely off to bed I wondered what tomorrow would bring.

The clock-radio goes off and here's the cousin of the previous night's newscaster daring me to face sunrise with his bad news. In disgust, I turned the radio off.

And then it dawned on me. The news has always been bad. And it's always been the same.

My God! It's a sham! I've been hoodwinked. Fooled at least, made fool of at most. No wonder their names are on ballots during elections. They're the ones who cry wolf the loudest. Why, they've made my life a bed of ruses.

Two of their best ruses:

Ruse 1 — In conspiratorial collaboration with the oil companies. Oil. There can be a shortage of anything and then when you're prepared to pay anything, to get hardly anything, suddenly there's no shortage. Aren't they nice to have around during a shortage. (What am I saying!)

Ruse 2 — French separatism or as the public sees it, a French-English Tug-of-War, with Canada being dragged through the mud. An object of pitiable concern and ridicule to our neighbor to the south. All because a handful of Frenchmen and Englishmen want to remake France and England here in Canada.

Where do they get the idea that this land is theirs to carve up among themselves. This may be news to them, but, this ain't France and this ain' t England. And, if you think it is, then, I've got to tell you — you got on the wrong boat, people. This is Canada.

And to the politicians and corporation heads and all news media — don't keep telling us what's wrong with our country, after all, you're leading it. Tell us what's right with our country. Challenge yourself! How can you make it better. Challenge us! How can we help make it better.

But don't ask us to tighten our belts, while you loosen your belts at the table of profits. Show us you are the leaders you said you were, and then we all can say "Oh Canada we stand on guard for thee." — Frank S. Morgan, 4008 White Rock.

Just a symptom

The news that hundreds of workers are being layed off in plywood plants throughout B.C. is finally good news for the future of our forests. If nothing else will put a stop to the plundering mismanagement and inadequate economic planning of our forest resource then it is good that the market place and our lack of competitiveness make us face realities.

It is not the high interest rates alone that are putting woodworkers out of work, it is the high cost of the end product, which makes it possible for fewer buyers to find what they want elsewhere. No mill that could sell plywood at half price would close down, but then, no company and no union would consider making that possible, even if it is feasible.

But, high company profits and the highest woodworkers' wages in the world, are not the real issue. They are merely symptomatic of the complete lack of forest management planning of the past two decades during which time the government literally 'gave away,' not just our best and most accessible timber but also the prerogative of sound forest economic planning. The give-away is well documented in the 1976 Royal Commission Report on Forest Policy.

It won't really matter if the Japanese market opens up to us, as Bennett predicts. The good timber is going fast and the second growth is not being managed for volume production. So it will run out in short order, and planting won't help, except a 100 years hence.

The 1976 Royal Commission Report is essentially a repeat of the inquiry of 1956. A spurt of sustained yield planning was done in the late 50's but it fizzled, because the government foresters have not dared spell out forest management guidelines. Our policy is 'logging' not forest management. That type of forestry is finite, and probably sooner than expected. — D. M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

Sold out

Suddenly with the energy crunch in the U.S.A., our politicians — the Socred variety — have decided that B.C. is wallowing in excess energy which must be utilized at once — no longer must we be hewers of wood and drawers of water. All very fine and up to a point. A change of direction on the part of this government might be all to the good. It seems to me it was the Socreds who started the business of shipping raw logs to Japan, and handed our coal over to Kaiser to be shipped to Japan at Roberts Bank — (which was constructed by the taxpayers), and it seems to me it was the Socreds who closed down the box car factory and a poultry plant. It also seems to me that it was the Socreds who were going to let B.C. Cellulose at Prince Rupert, simply fade away, Ocean Falls was not to be saved either. A steel mill was an NDP scheme that never materialized under Bennett.

At the moment I can see bad times ahead. Bennett has recently thrown out the hints and then there are those letters by Jack Davis.

Mr. Davis says, "we can produce all the gas and oil we want," and that energy using industries have a future here because "we can offer them security of supply for 20 or 30 years". That doesn't seem too long to me. I might even be alive when the security runs out.

Potentially, Mr. Davis says, "we can treble our output of hydro electric power". He doesn't of course expand on the cost in lost agricultural land and fish — etc.

Lastly, Mr. Davis mentions coal, "enough to look after our power and our gas needs for 100 years!" The exclamation mark is his. My great grandchildren will be inheriting our greenhouse world by then, that is if they have adapted to breathing carbon dioxide.

Industry of course will come. We don't have to go to any effort to lure it here. Considering our finite resources we should be choosy. I can remember as a child being told of the boundless resources in the United States!

Judging by past performances I have no reason to believe that the present government will manage our remaining resources wisely. Farmlands have been and still are being destroyed and the fishing industry has been largely ignored and too little has been spent on reforestation. But of course if we leave Canada and become part of Alberta things might be different — They might even be worse.— Monica Oldham, 511 Vietoria Avenue.

Save a flower

I feel it is my patriotic duty to inform your readers of the merciless crime which has been inflicted upon an innocent plant.

On Sept. 12 a geranium, belonging to Lookout Newspaper which is the newspaper for the Canadian forces base in Esquimalt, was brutally abducted by a group which calls themselves the International Geranium Grabbers. The plant is being held for a ransom of $250. IGG says the money will go to the United Way campaign. So far there has been a good response to Lookout's plea for donations for the return of this pathetic victim of cruelty. All donations have been given by forces personel as yet. What about we civilians? Can we not spare even a penny for this most worthy cause?

There have been high jackers, robbers, muggers, kidnappers, murderers etc. Now we have geranium grabbers. What next? If even a flower is not safe in it's own home then who and what is?

I personally would like to make a plea for the safety of geraniums everywhere. Please! If you people have a heart of any kind send a donation to: Lookout Save the Geranium Fund, Bldg. 4, Naden. Help make a geranium and an editor happy. — Ginny McNally, 839 Wollaston Street

New procedure

The Victoria Human Rights Coalition, a group comprised of representatives of various minority groups in Victoria, has followed with interest the recent controversy regarding the handling of complaints against the Victoria police force.

It is our experience that the average citizen, especially members of minority groups, is often ill-informed regarding complaint procedures and frightened by the possible consequences of confronting any bureaucratic structure (however open and unbiased that structure might be).

With this in mind we would like to urge all mayoralty and aldermanic candidates to look carefully at setting up a more sensitive and less intimidating method of resolving citizen complaints. We hope that the successful candidates will give due consideration to this complex issue after their election. — Neil Lindquist, Victoria Human Rights Coalition, P.O. Box 1752, Victoria.

JAMES RESTON

Where are the U.S. allies?

WASHINGTON — The niceties of normal diplomatic procedure are not working in Tehran because this is not a rational conflict between sovereign states but a hijacking.

The Ayatollah Khomeini is as much an outlaw as any other criminal who takes over a commercial airliner with a gun or a bomb, but with this difference: the hijacker usually acts on his own, but Khomeini is acting in the name of a nation and a religion to the detriment of both, and placing what's left of world diplomacy between nations in jeopardy.

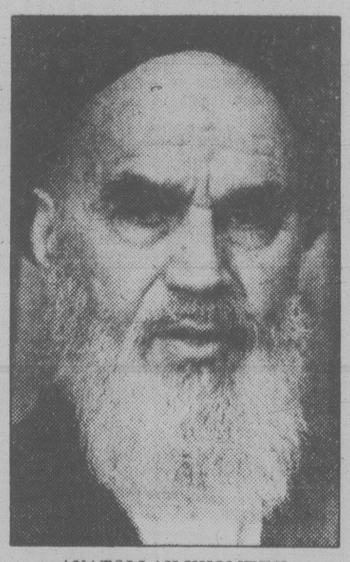

It has been established for generations that an embassy is not only a symbol but a physical part of a nation's sovereign territory. Even in the ugliest phase of the Cold War, embassies were respected not only as a safe haven for officials and their families, but as a refuge for dissenters.

Much as Moscow hated the Roman Catholic church and tried to intimidate its priests, it usually respected the sanctity of foreign embassies and had the decency, if that's the right word, or at least the good judgment, not to hound them down behind the gates, since the Soviets wanted diplomatic immunity for their own people and supporters.

Defying tradition

Khomeini is now defying this tradition, and his new acting foreign minister, who has lived in France for 17 years and should know better, has sent a letter to the secretary general of the United Nations, Kurt Waldheim, trying to change the question from Iran's violation of the UN Charter and the Vienna Convention on diplomatic immunity into an investigation of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. At no point does he even mention the violation of the U.S. embassy or the imprisonment of the hostages.

This is not merely a question between Washington and Tehran. You can argue that President Carter in the past should have handled the Iranian question in general and the shah in particular with more foresight, but what we are threatened with now is international anarchy, which is a concern of all civilized nations, and even those that are not so civilized.

AYATOLLAH KHOMEINI
. . . giving Allah a bad name

But where are the allies? The Western Europeans who yearned for "collective security"? They have said many sensible things at home and at the United Nations. They have praised Carter for his restraint and urged Khomeini to release the prisoners. No doubt they have expressed some sterner but discreet warnings in private, but this is not really good enough.

Carter cannot deal with this diplomatic and religious tangle alone. No doubt it was good politics to announce that the U.S. wouldn't buy any more Iranian oil (before they refused to sell it to us). But Tehran is probably right in saying that it can make more money by selling its oil on the spot-market in Rotterdam or elsewhere.

Two things are required, or so it seems in this corner:

□ First, a diplomatic boycott of Iran by the allies until Khomeini releases the hostage and restores normal diplomatic procedure. And if this fails, which it probably would, then a commercial boycott of Iran's exports and imports.

□ Second, some assertion from the nations of the Moslem world that Khomeini does not speak for their faith. The word "Ayatollah" means a "reflection of Allah," but he is now giving Allah a bad name and bringing the principle of moderation — even the whole idea of religion — into disrepute in an increasingly secular world.

There is very little chance of either a diplomatic or commercial boycott of Iran, or of any general protest in the Moslem nations against Khomeini's heretical view of the true faith. The general attitude here and among most politicians is that he is an old fanatic who will be destroyed by the fatal flaw of thinking he is what he merely pretends to represent.

But Khomeini has no monopoly on hypocrisy. The allies are condemning Iran, but buying its oil. The Communists are demonstrating in the streets of Tehran against the helpless hostages in the American embassy, as they demonstrated against the shah, and just waiting for the inevitable collapse of Khomeini.

And even here at home, we see an odd kind of hypocrisy. Khomeini has managed to do something that has eluded Jimmy Carter. He has been so outrageous that he has brought the American people together against him, but with one important exception. Even Khomeini can't make us save gas.

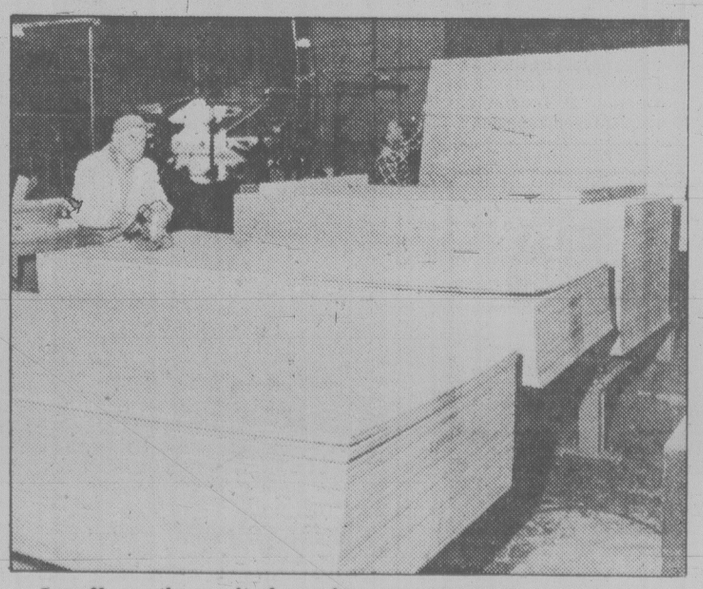

Honest conservation

What we need now is not a lot of people using up more fuel and running around shaking their fists at this bearded old man, but finally some honest conservation to relieve our reliance on overseas supplies.

The answer to the Iranian crisis is a major effort at collective security — at home, in the alliance of the industrial nations, and if possible, with some help from the true spirit of the Moslem world.

Everybody is crying these days to be "free," but as Somerset Maugham once wrote:

"If a nation values anything more than freedom, it will lose its freedom; and the irony of it is that if it is comfort or money that it values more, it will lose that too."

Layoffs are the result of poor forest management, says reader.

The world of Strangelove comes to Ely

By LAWRENCE MARTIN
The Globe and Mail

ELY, Nev. — This dusty town, cradled so gracefully in rolling mountain ranges, is one of the most remote in the United States.

It sits alone amid thousands of square miles of emptiness — only sand, sagebrush and barren mountains. There are no rivers or streams or boats or trains. Not even a bus comes into Ely.

The isolation has been cherished among the 5,600 people here. They say they have liked the idea of being able to stand on the street corner secure in the knowledge that everyone who walks by will know them.

But they are talking in the past tense now because the calm and isolation of their town is about to suffer a remarkable intrusion. Ely is to play host to what the U.S. Air Force calls "man's largest project," the MX mobile missile system.

Given the go-ahead recently by the Carter administration, the MX is a stunning project that will encompass an area of the United States that equals about five Connecticuts. It will change Ely's status from one of the country's most remote towns to one of the world's focal points.

The plan, which is to cost anywhere from $33 billion to $50 billion, calls for 200 MX missiles to roam about the barren wastelands of Nevada and Utah on mammoth $4.7 million transporter vehicles.

These vehicles will travel on 200 concrete oval pathways, each about 20 miles in length and widely separated from one another. Each transporter will be covered by a huge shield and with its MX missile will weigh 335 tons.

On the 200 ovals, there will be 4,600 huge concrete shelters, interspersed by distances of roughly a mile. These shelters will serve as mini launching pads and as hideaways for the missiles, which will carry 10 nuclear warheads each.

The idea is to confuse the Soviets, to keep them guessing as to the location of U.S. missiles, and to prevent them from being able to destroy them quickly with their own missiles. Since the 1960s, the United States has deployed a force of 1,054 land-based rockets in concrete underground silos in the Dakotas, but military experts decided that a new generation of Soviet missiles could deliver a knockout blow on these stationary targets and thus they have opted for the racetrack, hide-and-seek system.

Even if the Soviets can figure out which shelter hides an MX, the mobile system will be such that the transporter vehicle will be able to whisk the MX into a different shelter before the attacking Soviet missile hits. Close to $1 billion has been spent on development funds for the project and provided the system gets its expected go-ahead in Congress, construction will start next year and be completed in 1986.

Roughly two-thirds of the oval tracks are to be in Nevada and the remainder in neighboring Utah, where Governor Scott Matheson is worried. "This is a gigantic challenge to us. How are we going to maintain the integrity of the school system, utility systems, roads, water and housing?"

The magnitude of the project is described by Brig.-Gen. Guy Hecker, the Pentagon's MX salesman, as "larger than the Great Wall, larger than the Pyramids, larger than the Alaska pipeline or the Panama Canal."

Ely has not received final word on exactly where it will fit in, but in an interview last week the Pentagon's Lt.-Col. Jesse Ford said Ely will be "right in the middle of the deployment area."

This means Ely will bear the brunt of the dramatic changes necessary to accommodate the project. The missile system will require 14,000 permanent employees to keep it operational. It will require thousands more for related work such as water supply for the project and construction of the 4,600 shelters and rail and road networks in and out of the ovals.

Gen. Hecker said the project will require twice as much concrete as the Hoover Dam. Estimates are that about 150,000 new residents will pour into an area where the largest town (Cedar City, Utah) has a population of 15,000. Estimates are that Ely's population could jump tenfold in the next few years.

War games in the desert. The people of Ely suspect they have been burned by these once before. Beginning in the 1950s, U.S. atomic bomb tests were undertaken in Utah and Nevada. In later years it was discovered that unusually high numbers of people in the two states were victims of leukemia and cancer. Evidence has accumulated to suggest that radioactive fallout from the tests was responsible for the high incidence.

In Ely, Bonnie Cracraft, 39, works at the Hotel Nevada. Her family has lived in the town all their lives. Her father died in 1964 of leukemia at the age of 43, her 17-year-old daughter died of leukemia in 1975. Mrs. Cracraft had cancer herself when she was 24 but has recovered. She is worried now about whether the radioactivity will have any latent effects on her remaining four boys.

"A lot of people around here," says Joe Merica, editor of the Ely Daily Times, "still have a lot of leftover suspicions about the U.S. Air Force. You can understand why they don't want the MX."

Interviews with the townsfolk revealed, however, that while there is considerable resistance among farmers, ranchers and town veterans, there is a large younger segment that craves the economic growth the MX will bring.

When Roy Yelland, an amateur photographer, heard that the MX was coming, he said he decided to can his factory job and open a photography studio. "There's going to be a boom. I'm speculating on it. I'm going to take advantage."

Betty Whitehurst, manager of the local chamber of commerce, said that since copper mining, the town's main industry, is on the decline, Ely needs a boost from the MX.

Many ranchers are complaining about the project encroaching on their lands, Mrs. Whitehurst said, "but with all that surveillance going on for the MX oval loops, it's going to discourage cattle rustlers. And I'm not kidding, cattle rustling is a big problem around here."

John Crawford, a maintenance worker, said his poll indicates that most of the residents don't want the MX. He's right in speculating that "most of the new jobs will be filled by imports from the army and air force anyway."

Gen. Hecker has spoken in Ely and other tiny towns earmarked for the MX. In his pitch he says, "I've grown to love and admire the people out here. To me this has really become heartland America — independent spirit, patriotic spirit — just the things that you all stand for." Then, in stressing the need for the MX, he adds that "you have to start thinking of what would happen should there be — and God forbid if there is — 6,000 simultaneous explosions of one megaton over the U.S."

In Ely, many are patriotic but by the same token not interested in becoming the world's bullseye. There is also the fear that since the land-based Minuteman is becoming obsolete, the MX system might meet the same fate, bringing a boom-and-bust trauma to the town.

Congress wants the U.S. defence program expanded significantly. President Jimmy Carter realizes that increased defence spending would get the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks agreement ratified by the Senate. And although the governors of Utah and Nevada are clamoring for more information about the MX, they also generally favor the project.

It all makes Joe Merica, the young newspaper editor, rather disconsolate.

"The thing is, we don't really need this project for the health of our town," he said. "The copper industry isn't doing well but we're going to get a new power plant. It will employ 300 or 400 and pick up the slack. There is also drilling for oil all over the place out here and people are crawling the hills looking for gold and silver.

The problem of the addled aged

THE ECONOMIST

The heavy burden placed on health and social services by the growing number of old people in the population has been pointed out often enough, but not always the extra burden caused by the minority within this age group who are demented. A recent report from Britain's Office of Health Economics presents a horrifying picture.

They are the survivors of those born in the last decade of the 19th century and the first three decades of the 20th. Thanks to the low birthrate of the 1920s and 1930s, there will be a fall in the number of the young elderly in England and Wales by the end of this century. But those aged 80 and over will increase by more than half a million by 1995, to 1¾ million. In this age group the prevalence of dementia is at its highest, occurring in one in five people.

Dementia should not be identified with the confusion shown by old people suffering from treatable physical conditions. The report is concerned with irreversible dementia, which in the old is of two major types: one is associated with impaired blood supply to the brain; the other, called senile dementia, is characterized by degeneration of brain tissue and the disappearance of nerve cells.

In both types, the symptoms eventually include a change of personality, loss of memory, incontinence, wandering (especially at night) and general intellectual deterioration. There are few more distressing sights than a group of demented old people in a psychiatric hospital (and few more heartening than a 15-year-old voluntary worker trying to communicate with them).

But most of these people, four out of five, live in their own homes, some alone, but most of them supported by their family. It is official and professional policy that admission to institutional care for any old person should be deferred as long as possible, and that help should be concentrated on the domiciliary services — home nursing, incontinent laundry service, meals on wheels, night sitters — supplemented by day hospital care or short admissions to give a family temporary relief. These services are now threatened by local spending cuts, despite the government's assertion that the old are a priority group.

In addition, family support may no longer be such a strength in the future. Seven in 10 over-75s are women, and more than four in five of these are single, widowed or divorced. And, with smaller families, the old will have fewer children to look after them. The cost to the state of caring for dementia is put at roughly $1 billion in 1976 prices. But no price can be put on the economic and social cost to a family caring for a mindless parent.

Flex-time for children?

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — When I was a child, I was once delirious with an illness; and said, 'When I'm grown up I want to have 12 children — but have them live in one house and me in another.'

Over the years I've sometimes wondered if I was raving. At any rate, just how long should mothers spend actually in the company of their children? And I'm not talking about the old argument about whether a little baby should be strapped to its Mama's back or dumped in a communal creche; but simply how long the school day should be, relative to the working day of everybody else.

In some countries — Britain, America, Australia — we take it for granted that the kids' school day ends long before any working parent is free. But it isn't like that all over.

In France the vast majority of children is in Ecoles Maternelles from the age of three. In Spain the school day ends at 5:30, except when it's too hot to think much past lunch-time. But in West Germany they chuck the Jungen out at one o'clock, if you please, and the mothers are expected to provide lunch and help with homework until the lads are well into their teens. No wonder their women have a tough time getting out to work.

Here, the fuss about the length of the school day shows no sign of slackening. In Stafford the parents actually staged a two-day protest because the school day had been disastrously cut to save money — and they weren't worrying about their own working lives, these parents, but how much teaching their children would be missing.

In West Sussex, parents, not to mention the police, viewed with enormous misgiving a plan to stagger school hours: the idea was to save money on the buses by having one bus make two calls at different times instead of having two simultaneous vehicles. It looked fine on paper, but it meant that half the school population was tipped out into the streets from about two o'clock onwards.

Teachers' unions complain that they work too hard, anyway, for the money they get, and that a longer school day would drive them round the twist entirely; and it may be true. But working women just wish they'd sort out some sort of shift work to make it possible.

When you come to think about it, arguments about when shops ought to be open went through the state of early closing days and limited shop hours, when it was thought that these were the only ways of stopping the shop assistants being overworked. Shops are now through with all that, and into the stage of intelligent six-day opening plus late nights, with sensible union negotiations to protect the staff; and who knows, any decade now the banks may get the same message. So why not schools?

I'm not suggesting Saturday working, because that wouldn't suit the needs of parents or teachers and isn't necessary anyway. But if you had schools open, as schools, from say eight in the morning until six at night, that wouldn't mean that any one teacher or any one child had to be there all that time. You could have flex-time for children as you do for office workers.

At the Women's Trade Union Congress last spring, one woman proposed the longer school day as the answer to a working mother's problems; what a shame that the male-led National Union of Teachers hadn't sent a delegate to that conference, so they weren't there to protest.

Certainly, they hate being thought of as child-minders; but shouldn't any social policy think of children, and parents, and teachers as part of one whole problem, not just of Education with a capital E going on all by itself in a vacuum?

Oh, but do we want our mothers to see less of their beloved brats? Isn't it better if they are forced to spend more time with them? We don't want a whole lot of kids growing up scarcely seeing their parents the way they do on the kibbutz, do we?

Ah, the kibbutz. Whenever that's mentioned, the argument always runs on whether it's good for the kibbutz parents to see so little of their children (helped along by one of the most misleading books of the century, Children of the Dream, by that ass Bruno Bettelheim). But in fact the kibbutz parents probably see more of their children than other people.

Where an American or European mother will have her child around her all the time, but be doing 20 other things as well — cleaning the floors, peeling potatoes, trying to get the cat not to get into the bed she's making — the kibbutz children get three solid hours, 4 to 7, of their parents' undivided attention.

And why? Because the parents stop picking all those oranges, oiling all those tractors and ironing the vast brassieres in the communal laundry at the same time as the kids are released from the children's house. If I could have just one thing for women by waving my magic wand, I'm not sure I wouldn't choose the simple benefit of having the same working hours for grown-ups and children.

It all seems so absurd: here are the world's labor unions anguishing for a shorter working week to solve the unemployment problem; women wanting to see something of their children and have proper jobs; and the whole thing could be solved if only they'd get together over hours. But when it comes to teachers, and parents, and trade unionists, that seems about as sensible as saying everything would be fine, if only the lion could come to some sensible agreement with the lamb.

French instruction major issue in Saanich school board voting

By AB KENT

Three candidates are making their opposition to immersion French instruction an issue in the Saanich school board elections Saturday.

One seat in each of three zones is open with six candidates — two for each seat — seeking election as trustees.

The incumbent for the fourth zone — B.C. School Trustees' Association president Rubymay Parrott of North Saanich, was re-elected by acclamation.

The trio opposing immersion French are incumbents Jack Armstrong and Esther Galbraith and newcomer Donald Hacker. They say the district is too small to support the 13 students who registered when the program was proposed.

They also fear the cost of maintaining what they see as parallel systems in English and French as the program grows.

Trustees at their final meeting before the election agreed to postpone a decision on the subject until the new board is elected.

Other subjects of concern in the election are rising taxes, communication with the board, busing, core curriculum and the special needs of children.

The candidates:

Jack Armstrong, 60, is a science graduate and grower's co-op manager. At present the board's vice-chairman, he seeks re-election in Saanich zone for a seventh two-year term.

He was born here and has lived his adult life on the Saanich Peninsula, raising three children. Bridge and tennis are his relaxation.

Armstrong places emphasis on finances and the pressure to increase spending and teachers and says bigger classes might solve the problem.

He urges budgeting within inflation, cutting staff if necessary and raising the parent-teacher ratio to 20-1 over two years.

John Betts, a community college instructor for more than 10 years, co-ordinates physics at Camosun College and seeks election in the Saanich zone.

Father of three children, he is author of two books and enjoys sports, gardening, reading and music.

His experience in administration and budget was obtained from RCAF service and at community colleges, and he believes in getting the best educational value out of a responsible budget.

Betts says there should be improved communication at all levels in the school system and a review of the busing situation.

Esther Galbraith, incumbent for Central Saanich, seeks a second term.

She is a 30-year local resident, has a hobby farm, enjoys fishing and the outdoors, and is a director of Silver Threads.

Galbraith feels close co-operation between trustees, teachers and parents is needed to keep high teaching standards within available finances.

She has acted as liaison between teachers, the municipality and the board.

Pressure for a French immersion program is undesirable, she says, and adds that successful French language and culture programs in grades 5-12 should not be diluted by a program that could lead to separate systems — one English, one French — and higher costs.

Donald Hacker, 49, seeks the Sidney seat. He is now a car salesman after retiring with 30 years' service in aircraft electronics, technical training and maintenance management. He has experience as a town councillor and in organizing and managing a nursery school.

Hacker is married with three children in Sidney schools. His interests include the Saanich Power Squadron.

Effective management of schools and ensuring that Sidney people are represented by a resident of that community are two of his objectives.

He favors second language courses for those wishing linguistic improvement but opposes French immersion as potentially divisive, discriminatory and detrimental to academic achievement.

Roy Hyndman, a research scientist and an incumbent seeking the Sidney seat, was elected in a byelection this year.

Married with two school children, he is concerned about tax restraint in a community which includes many persons on fixed income.

He wants a system providing children with challenge and the essential skills needed for adulthood.

Hyndman says programs should allow for diverse needs, interests and abilities and wants teachers, administrators, trustees and parents to work as a team.

Hyndman favors French immersion as a means of preparing children for the future.

Vittorio Preto, 40, a geological engineer for the provincial mines ministry for 12 years, is Italian-born and has lived in B.C. since the age of 19. He is contesting the Central Saanich zone.

A graduate of the University of B.C. and McGill and a member of professional organizations, he is married with three school children.

Preto's work accustoms him to crew management, organization and budgeting large sums of money.

He sees an opportunity for educational programs emphasizing the basics as well as the special talents and needs of children within limits of a responsible budget and tax restraint.

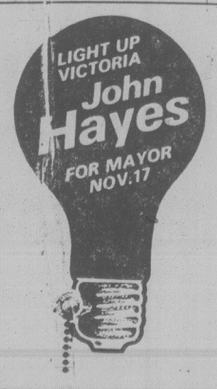

Preto believes more community involvement in schools and communication between schools, trustees and homes will help stave off the danger of a depersonalized and sterile educational environment.

Can a woman break through in Esquimalt?

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The municipal election campaign in Esquimalt is a race that almost wasn't.

Darwin Albert Robinson filed his papers less than an hour before nominations closed Oct. 29, dashing the prospect of acclamation for the three hopefuls who had already filed.

Ald. Ken Hill, however, took a run at the job being vacated by Mayor Art Young and found out no one else was trying for it.

In addition to Robinson, Blair is being challenged by Victoria May Gains, 37, a cashier-clerk, and Robert Henry Jones, 59, a retired health care consultant.

But the electorate shouldn't expect any bombast in the dying days of the campaign.

After one recent all-candidates' meeting, the message was clear: virtually everyone in Esquimalt, including those hoping to sit on council, want to retain the status quo.

There are no burning issues and on such matters as spending and taxes, the operative word is conservatism.

One aspect to the election is Mrs. Gains' gender — there has never been a women member of Esquimalt municipal council, at least as far as anyone can recall.

Mrs. Gains isn't sure Esquimalt is ready for the big step but she's hoping the time has come.

As there are no spectacular issues, what are the platforms of the various candidates?

Blair says he wants to see Esquimalt continue paying the lowest taxes in the Victoria area.

He wants council to continue its hard line on municipal spending. Increases to the municipal budget in the past two years have been limited to three per cent.

Esquimalt has achieved a comfortable population density and he promises to press for tough zoning bylaws that will maintain the municipality's present single-family dwelling areas.

Blair thinks Esquimalt should let the Capital Regional District know that such projects as septic waste disposal sites and short take-off and landing strips aren't wanted in the municipality.

An economic development commission for the area is fine with Blair as long as it's made up of elected members accountable to the public.

Blair believes recycling activities should be encouraged, and he'd like to see Esquimalt's senior citizens with a place of their own to relax.

Gains feels it's important for a woman to be on council so that women, particularly single parents, have someone they can call on with municipal problems.

She believes in sound fiscal management without increasing the tax rate.

Gains says she supports such programs as Neighborhood Watch and Block Parents as well as the Neighborhood Improvement and Residential Rehabilitation Assistance program.

Jones has been on Esquimalt's Parks and Rcereation Commission since January, 1977, serving as chairman for the past two years.

He points out that he has been working with elected Esquimalt representatives on policy matters, planning and the operation of parks and recreational programs.

While Jones would like to encourage light industry in Esquimalt, he stresses they should locate in areas already designated for the purpose.

Jones says he'd protect present zoning, and he wants to see a continuation of the municipality's sound fiscal policies.

He is retired from the Navy and is employed as a marine consultant.

Seaman death inquest set

An inquest will be held into the death of Master Seaman L. W. Schultz, 25, of Rolleyview, Alta., who shot himself on the upper deck of HMCS Gatineau.

A Canadian Armed Forces spokesman said Tuesday Schultz fired a warning shot from a non-service .44 Magnum before turning the weapon on himself Friday while the ship was in full view of the public in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

The vessel was in the harbor to take part in Remembrance Day ceremonies.

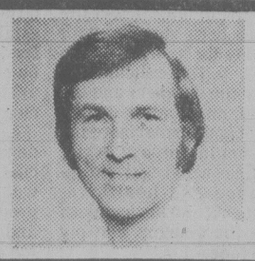

Military and Victoria city police are investigating the incident.

City candidates cool to hawkers

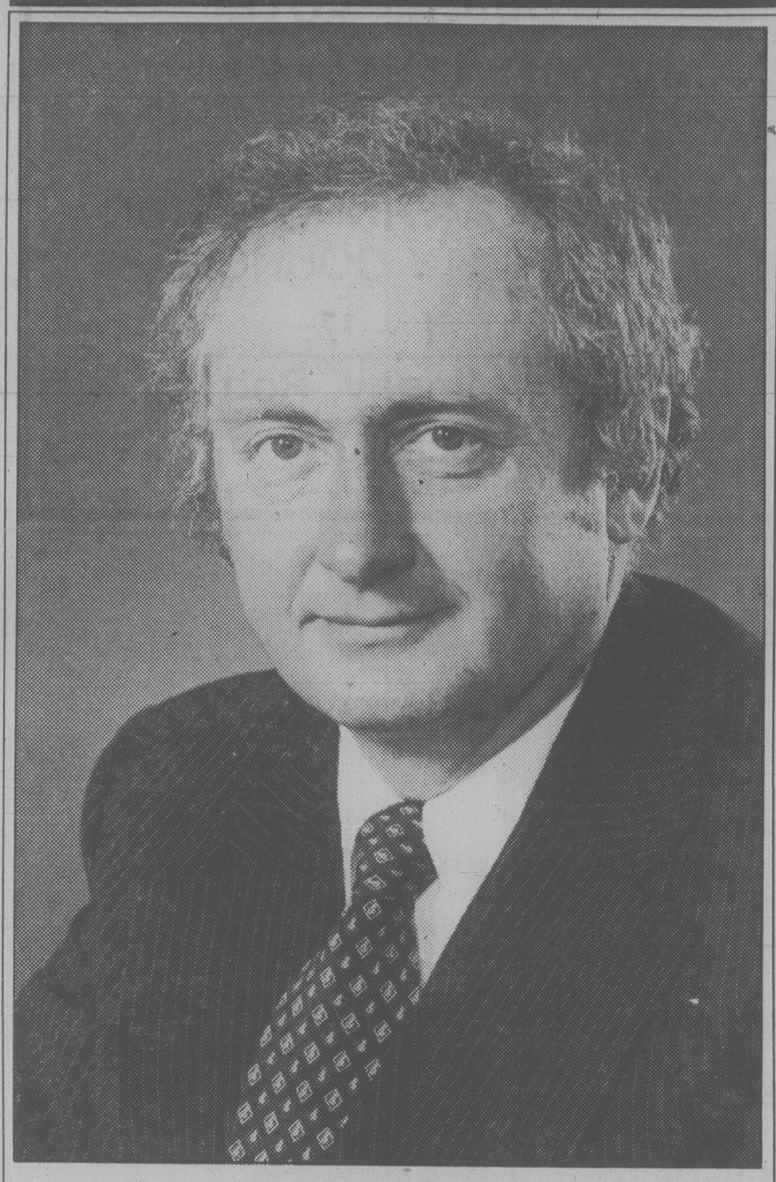

By AL FORREST

Causeway hawkers are in for a rough ride in the new year, according to the results of a tourist questionnaire of municipal candidates.

Of 11 Victoria candidates who responded, all had reservations about popcorn stands and sausage carts and some were strongly against them.

The survey was conducted by the Visitors Information Centre which asked candidates their views on tourist-related issues.

The candidates agreed tourism is a vital industry but they disagreed on how tourist promotion should be financed. They urged the provincial government to continue its Seattle-Victoria ship service, using the Marguerite or a replacement.

The only emotional issue was the Causeway vendors.

Bill Tindall, the only Victoria mayoralty candidate to respond to the questionnaire, said he was dismayed by the presence of hawkers on the main Causeway. They should be restricted to the lower Causeway and the Ship Point's area, site of the old Black ball ferry dock.

The views of Victoria aldermanic candidates:

Charles Ball: I do not believe the vendors are an asset to the Causeway and should be required to either reduce their numbers or locate elsewhere.

Robert Mingay: I feel the city has been very lax with regard to the vendors on the Causeway. There should be a limit to the numbers and the type of merchandise they can sell and furthermore the city should impose strict guidelines with regard to appearance and health requirements and the locations which the vendors can ply their trade.

Ron McKenzie: I am against vendors on the Causeway. They should be at Ship's Point only, as an experiment, and if not satisfactory there should be a ban the following year.

John Shields: I do not favor the continuation of vendors on the Causeway. I would like to reduce the Coney Island atmosphere in that area. Perhaps a special area could be designated on a trial basis.

Patrick Skillings: It depends on the personality of the individual vendor. They have their place if they are colorful characters.

Bill McElroy: I have mixed views on the hawker question. It needs more study.

Joe Richards: Some vendors are a definite problem. Call vendors to a meeting before licensing is granted.

Peter Yorke: I do not believe there should be vendors on the Causeway. But there could be some sort of food bazaar.

Gretchen Brewin: The Causeway in summer is a place of confusion. The city should consider establishing city-owned booths, like ones established at Swartz Bay ferry terminal, which could be rented out and regulated as to type of product and cleanliness.

Kenneth Sinclair: I am negative about many of the current group of vendors. I would cancel the current group and hold a competition and then select the winners for a two-year term.

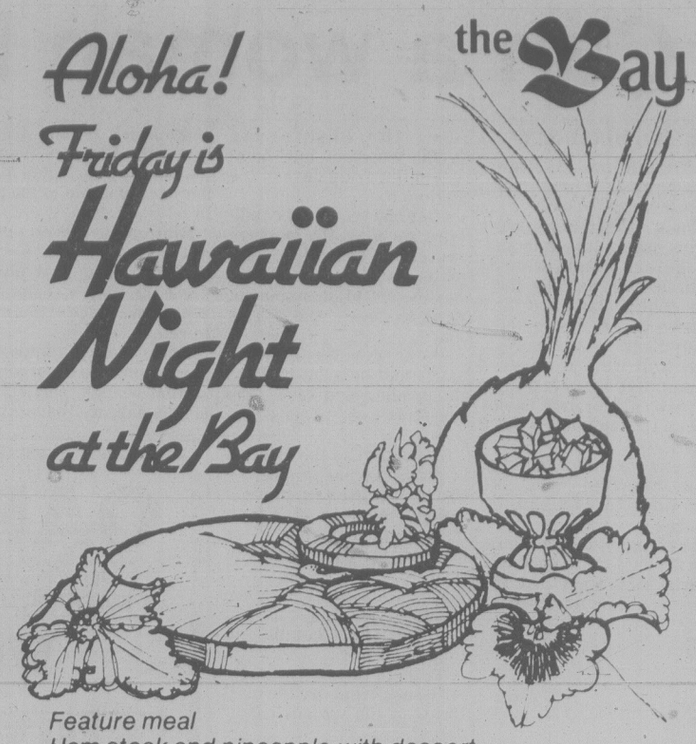

A number of candidates from Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Saanich also commented on the Causeway hawkers and most were negative.

Candidates spar over new outfall

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Whether or not the capital region opts for sewage treatment plants, the Clover Point outfall has to be built, Ald. Murray Glazier said Wednesday at a mayoralty all-candidates meeting staged by the Chamber of Commerce.

Glazier, chairman of the Capital Region District board said there should be a referendum on the $30 to $50 million which will have to be borrowed to pay for the plants if and when treatment is authorized, but he disagreed with Ald. John Hayes' call for a six-month moratorium on construction of the outfall.

"Most people in Victoria think it's disgusting we dump raw sewage into the ocean," said Hayes. "Other cities can afford sewage treatment. Even some third world countries have sewage treatment and we say here we can't afford sewage treatment? I say it's garbage."

Mayoralty candidate Ald. Bill Tindall said he accepted the expert advice of consulting engineers that the outfall will work, while David Borgstrom backed Hayes' plan for a region-wide vote on sewage treatment.

Glazier also made one new promise. He would limit next year's city budget increase to six per cent.

On other topics, Hayes mentioned his proposal for a Centennial Square farmer's market as something for local residents to enjoy, but Tindall said he got the Trades Licence Act changed in 1974 to allow small entrepreneurs to set up booths in the square. Ten licences were sold the first year but few people expressed any interest since then, he said.

The square is still available to anyone, he added. Tindall also noted that while Hayes was against making "a gaudy Coney Island" for tourists here, Hayes voted against Tindall's proposal earlier this year to get the sidewalk vendors off the causeway and down onto the Ship Point area beside the Inner Harbor.

Tindall also referred to his proposal for a federal energy and transportation institute to be located in Victoria.

It would act as a resource centre and co-ordinate research into these two key areas, and would also monitor public opinion on such matters as energy price increases, alternative energy sources and changes in transportation methods.

If the current proposal to make the old Carnegie library a headquarters for the city's social and cultural organizations falls through, Tindall has said as mayor he would offer it as initial quarters for the institute.

Hayes told the audience of 250 businessmen that Victoria is promoting tourism too heavily.

"It's my honest opinion that we're now over-emphasizing tourism and its role in the Victoria economy. I believe we can attract more people by doing things for ourselves."

He said the city has "so many opportunities we're missing" and called for a "pocket park" downtown on city-owned property in the 700 block Johnson Street, opposite the municipal parkade. Hayes also wants to see colorful kiosks scattered around city streets.

"We have to make our downtown exciting for ourselves and the visitors will follow, I assure you."

Borgstrom suggested the city needs even more outside promotion "of the fine businesses we have" to bring visitors here.

Victoria is "the San Francisco of Canada," he said, and could stage an annual music festival. As mayor he would emphasize culture and the arts.

If Victorians don't like working in tourism-related jobs, then there won't be much other employment, said Borgstrom.

"More people are going to have to realize that $6 and $7 jobs in retail sales just aren't there. If you don't want it, you don't have to come to Victoria."

The fourth candidate also took a swipe at the press. "It seems to be a big secret I'm running for mayor," he said.

Geriatrics plan for VGH quashed

A plan initiated by the Victoria Downtown Business Association to turn Victoria General Hospital into a school of geriatric studies run by the University of Victoria has been shelved by Victoria city council.

Ald. Bob Wright, chairman of the city's land-use planning and zoning committee, ruled out of order any further discussion of the plan by local lawyer Gerald Neely after two alderman started squabbling about hospital planning.

Aldermen Ron McKenzie and Bill McElroy started assessing the merits of previous Social Credit and NDP provincial governments in health care but Wright cut them short.

"I'm not going to let the NDP versus Social Credit philosophy get into this. I won't allow any discussion of Bennett versus Barrett or garbage like that," he said.

The alderman said a report on future use of the Victoria General — which will move in about a year to a new site on Helmcken Road in Saanich — is due to be released soon, and until then city council shouldn't discuss the subject.

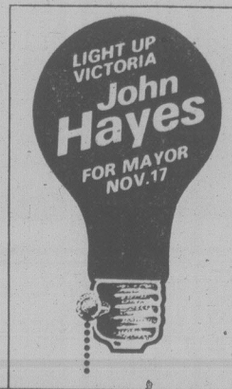

Two juveniles held for thefts

Two 14-year-old juveniles were nabbed by Saanich police after three daylight house burglaries Wednesday.

About $900 worth of goods including a $750 gold wedding ring were taken.

Police said the ring was stolen from the home of Larry McClung, 4774 Spring.

Sept. 26, Bennett was on a business trip to Asia and he pleaded ignorance of the affair when he returned.

Tony Tozer, Bennett's adviser, also did a disappearing act Wednesday after making a statement that expenses for Kelly and Miss MacKay at constituency meetings were paid for by a perpetual party campaign fund.

There was nothing unusual about general campaign expenses being paid for from the fund, said Tozer, shortly before he left Victoria for a few days off.

Meanwhile, the editor of the Williams Lake Tribune said Wednesday that four of the eight suspect letters under investigation by the RCMP are inexplicably missing from the newspaper files.

Editor Diana French said Wednesday that the four letters were among eight bearing out-of-town signatures printed in support of the Social Credit party during the May 10 provincial election campaign.

She said four were brought to the newspaper's attention by Peter Snowden, a well-known NDP supporter in the community, while the other four were culled from a check of back issues of the paper.

They were picked for verification only because they were from out of town. Local political partisans are well-known in a town the size of Williams Lake, said Mrs. French, but The Tribune hasn't the time or resources to double-check letters from other points.

However, when RCMP investigators arrived at the paper to examine the originals of the letters last Thursday, four were missing from the files. The other four were discovered hidden away in a box where they had been placed when file space ran out.

Of the four letters that were found, two have since been certified as genuine.

"This has really thrown us for a loop," said Mrs. French.

Fish firm earnings decline

RICHMOND (CP) — British Columbia Packers Ltd. has reported net earnings for the first three-quarters of 1979 were $5.5 million or $9.28 a share, compared with $8.7 million or $14.67 a share for the same period in 1978.

The fish-packing company said in its interim report that sales were up 11.9 per cent to $201.3 million from $179.9 million the previous year.

B.C. Packers said increased competition for fish in 1979 had substantially increased fish prices and the cost of product inventories has reached record levels.

Cost of carrying the inventories during the remainder of the year will be substantial and net earnings for the final quarter of 1979 will be considerably less than the $3.8 million reported last year, the company said.

Following Foley was no folly

By AB KENT

The man they called Foley would find it incredible that diggers are still working over the time-worn gravel and rocky outcrops where he discovered gold on the Leech River 115 years ago.

But then he could never have dreamed the price of a single ounce would bring more than $440 on 1979 gold markets.

Although rarely connected with southern Vancouver Island's 1864-5 gold rush, it was Foley who on July 14, 1864, is supposed to have been the first to find gold in the river that bears the name of his leader, Lieut. Peter J. Leech, who got the credit. Foley's first name seems to have been lost in time.

The wave of miners that followed Leech's party dragged themselves through wild rain forest and boulder-strewn gorges, pitting themselves against the river and its tributaries to recover only around $250,000 worth of gold.

Amor de Cosmos, who would be premier of the young province within eight years, was enticed. With partners J.J. Southgate and Charles H. Wallace, property was staked 16 miles up the San Juan from what is now Port Renfrew.

In a fading document from Colonial Office papers dated Nov. 17, 1864, they asked Gov. Arthur Edward Kennedy's permission to mine a quartz vein.

Leechtown's ghosts have never really been allowed to rest since, even though the original rush lasted only a few months.

A long succession of optimists have had the area staked almost continuously.

Today, at home and abroad, scrabbling for gold spurs placer and hard rock mining, encouraged by hot free market trading. Interest grows obsessive as inflation mounts and important currencies decline.

In August, 127 applications for placer mining leases in B.C. were made to the office of chief gold commissioner Ted Bowles. By September, 569 placer leases had been issued for the seven months, 65 more than for all of 1978.

Hard rock claim units are coming in at a rate of 130 a day this year and at Sept. 1 totalled 31,681, compared with 25,541 for all of last year.

Bowles attributes this partly to an improved climate in the mining industry, indicating a higher level of confidence in the government and its revised mining rules.

In 1966 there had been 91,000 hardrock claim units issued. The figure declined to 78,901 in 1972, the year the NDP government was elected, and to 35,000 in 1973.

What has been going on in Leechtown is occurring in all former and potential gold properties in B.C., by individual prospectors, mining corporations and promoters.

Interest is not confined to this province. In California and Nevada, for example, old tailings are being worked, prospectors comb the mountains for new lodes and old mines re-open.

Machines are moving 3.5 million tons of rock to get more gold and silver from what may have been the richest vein — the Comstock Lode — on Nevada's western rim.

At today's metal prices it is economic to move many tons of rock at perhaps $50 a ton, with labor-saving heavy machinery, to get at an ounce of gold.

At home, there are a number of large mines whose main output is other than gold or silver, usually copper, lead and zinc, which get a steady bonus income from precious metal recovery during ore refining.

One on northern Vancouver Island in 1977 derived 1.5 million grams of gold as a byproduct, at the time representing 25 per cent of all the gold mined in B.C. that year, according to mines department records. To the end of June this year B.C. production was 3.6 million grams worth $33.7 million, indicating where the total may be by Dec. 31.

Meanwhile, some old sites are being re-examined and some new ones are developing. Carolin Gold Mines, on Ladner Creek near Hope, expects to be producing within 13 months. Already its stock sells around $12.

But it's the romantic notion that persists, the vision of a man with a shovel, pan or rocker bent over a river bar in the quest for placer gold.

As of September there were nine placer leases in the immediate Leechtown area, two on the river above the overgrown townsite and one high on the Sooke River. Two more are south of Survey Mountain southwest of Jordan Meadows.

Many are held by individuals hoping to resurrect the past, captivated by the idea of striking it rich, of self-reliance, wresting the earth's treasure from wilderness reclaimed.

Some leases are owned by people like Marvin Richter and Bill Morris, partners who also hold hardrock claims in the area. Richter has been there 18 years and spends most of his time trying to find a new way to separate gold from sand, and of fusing free gold dust into nuggets.

He is cagey about his success and says he is not there to make a living.

Much of the known placer mining area of the province has been secured; a new placer site is a rare thing. Since 1975 the provincial government has recognized only designated areas for placer leases.

On Vancouver Island these are the Leech River and Loss Creek. On the mainland, Omineca, Cariboo, Clinton-Lillooet, Atlin, Liard, Osoyoos, Greenwood, Vernon, Nelson, Ft. Steele and Westminster.

Loss Creek, emptying into Juan de Fuca Strait, has about 20 placer leases, all near tidewater and all long-staked.

At the turn of the century the list included Jordan River, the San Juan, Sombrio, Wreck Bay and Zeballos.

A 1909 map compiled to show geology and minerals on the island indicated gold-bearing quartz west of Sooke Lake north of the Leech River; on the upper reaches of the San Juan and Jordan rivers; straddling China Creek on the Alberni Canal and scattered north of Cape Cook.

Of all these areas, only Zeballos yielded a sustained commercial gold mine. The Old Privateer yielded 150,000 ounces of gold in 11 years between 1937 and 1948.

Up to 1900 was the golden age of prospecting on the island. A sketch map of 1895 bears claimstakes in China Creek mining camp with colorful, adventuresome names like Prince of Wales, Balley Hooley, Duke of York, Little Bucker and Alberni Syndicate.

There were more placer or hardrock claims on the Franklin River, Granite and Museum Creeks.

The Spaniards are said to have been first to mine the Jordan River area circa 1767, after noticing the Indians had nuggets they found in the river.

Legend says the Spanish also used a lost cave or abandoned shaft for caching gold from Mexican conquests, and that remains an elusive but fascinating speculation for treasure hunters.

B.C.'s first gold strike was in the Queen Charlottes in 1852, followed by the Cariboo rush six years later, putting the province on the map.

Gold lodes were known in the Gulf Islands, and in 1864 Gov. Kennedy ordered a resources survey of Vancouver Island that led to the Leechtown strike.

In 1861 came the Stikine strike; the following year it was Omineca; 1872-80 Cassiar, and 1898 the Klondike, the last of the great western gold rushes.

LADY AND MALE COMPANIONS catered to wants of miners in Leechtown camp. Store and saloon in tents pitched between trees at Kennedy Flats offered wines, liquors, cigars, and axe-sharpening.

Tindall best man for mayor: Young

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Retiring Mayor Mike Young today endorsed Ald. Bill Tindall for mayor in the Saturday civic election, saying he has the leadership quality to get things done in Victoria.

Young said on the basis of experience, leadership qualities, the ability to instil confidence and respect among their colleagues and among the city staff, Tindall ranks highest among the four candidates.

He would not say why he ranked aldermen John Hayes and Murray Glazier below Tindall.

"I could say things but I don't think you should knock people."

Young said all three aldermen have the ability to be mayor, but when you look at their comparative records over the last eight years, Tindall comes out on top.

"The mayor, after all, is a persuader rather than having executive powers, and he must have the capability of instilling confidence in his colleagues, and he must have the ability of working with city staff."

Young said ideas are not enough unless you have the ability to put them into practice.

He said Tindall has a demonstrated talent for getting things off the ground.

Young said that council has been lacking "in people who I can say to, as mayor: 'Okay, I want this job done.'

"I would rank Bill Tindall very highly. I would rank Bob Wright very highly. I would rank Frank Carson very highly also. If you ask them and it looked difficult, they could get the job done."

Wright is running for re-election as alderman, and Carson, who was an alderman for one year in 1977, is also a candidate this time.

"I hope that you will agree with me, and lend support to Bill Tindall for mayor, but regardless of who succeeds at the polls on Saturday, you and I should offer the winning candidate every support and encouragement we can to keep the direction of Victoria on a positive course for the next two years," Mayor Young said.

HITSCHMANOVA
. . . Nov. 28 meeting

Lotta coming to open drive

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, perhaps Canada's best known fund raiser, will be in Victoria Nov. 23 for a week-long stay.

Founder of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, Hitschmanova will be discussing the results of her latest four-month swing through developing countries, her 27th such trip in the 34 years of USC's existence.

Hitschmanova will be guest speaker at a public meeting at 8 p.m. Nov. 28 in the Empress Hotel to outline details of the USC's work and to open this year's appeal for funds.

The USC's projects included such diverse activities as creating a brickmaking unit in Botswana, the shipping and distribution of milk powder to children, TB and leprosy patients in Lesotho, a model home for destitute girls in Bangladesh, construction of water tanks and cooking stoves in rural Java and family planning programs in Hong Kong and Swaziland. More than 21,000 children have been cared for in USC-sponsored homes in 13 countries over the past 30 years.

Airlines just skimming the cream, says Smith

Oak Bay MLA Brian Smith today said he is fed up with airlines making profits out of the Victoria run without providing the capital city with the service it needs.

"The airlines have been skimming cream.

"It is time all airlines serving Victoria assumed the responsibilty for providing a full service as well as reaping the benefits of being on this route."

He was provoked, he said, by an announcement by CP Air it will apply to join Air Canada and Pacific Western Airlines on the Victoria-Vancouver run.

He said a study of the CP Air proposal shows it plans to arrive at Pat Bay airport during peak hours, about the same time PWA and Air Canada flights arrive.

Meanwhile, there are huge gaps in the service, especially late at night and at mid-morning.

Smith said he has already protested to Ottawa the decision by Air Canada to end late night service from Vancouver and further protests would follow.

"It is time all airlines serving Victoria were brought to task on this question," he said.

"Airlines have been skimming cream without giving us a full service."

He said Victoria needs at least two new trips out of Vancouver. One is required around 11 p.m. as a cleanup flight to allow Victorians to get home the same night. Charter planes from California and Hawaii arrive too late to make the last plane and many Victorians have to spend an extra night in Vancouver.

Another urgent need, he said, is for a morning flight from Vancouver to Victoria.

Now there is nothing from 7:40 a.m. to about 11:40 a.m., creating a four-hour wait for the next flight.

"That is an incredible gap for service to a capital city."

The two obvious solutions, he said, would be for the air transport committee to order CP Air to provide a late night flight and to direct Air Canada to provide mid-morning service to Victoria.

The air transport committee is expected to hold hearings early in the new year on CP Air's application to fly between Victoria and Vancouver.

Smith also said he was disappointed at the way Air Canada has changed. It used to be an airline providing service and now it is mainly an airline out to make money.

The CP Air application was disappointing, he said, because its evening flight would arrive in peak time, around 10 p.m., within minutes of a flight by Air Canada.

That might make sense for CP Air but it makes no sense to Victorians, he said.

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Mel Cooper in an interview also expressed concern about the lack of late night service out of Vancouver but he took a softer tone towards the CP Air application.

"We will support it because any additional service in and out of Victoria is welcome," he said.

However, Cooper expressed concern about the strain on terminal facilities that would result if CP Air's application to fly into Pat Bay is accepted.

He said he is encouraged by a statement from CP Air president Ian Gray that the company would be willing to pay for expansion of Pat Bay terminal if an agreement to recapture the money can be made with Transport Canada.

Goult defends absence

Eyebrows were raised Wednesday when Oak Bay mayoralty candidate John Goult failed to turn up at an all-candidates meeting.

But Goult said today organizers of the meeting knew well in advance why he was unable to attend.

Nobody appeared to know at the meeting in the municipal hall but Goult said he had written a letter of apology to the Association of Women Electors, sponsors of the meeting, giving reasons he could not attend.

Goult said, as president of the McPherson Foundation, he had accepted a dinner invitation five weeks ago from the Canada Council.

The council, along with the foundation, had made it possible to bring the Peking Opera to Victoria.

As president, Goult said it was his duty to attend to encourage Canada Council participation in other major events being brought to Victoria.

In addition, two weeks ago he had been invited by Channel 10 to appear on television on Wednesday evening.

He and the other mayoralty candidate Doug Watts appeared on the show.

Watts later attended the all-candidates meeting.

Goult said he was faced with a conflict of duty and would much have preferred to have attended the public meeting.

Hawk shakeup vowed as Canucks win again

FOILED in bid to score a second goal, Chicago's Rich Preston (16) is thwarted at goalmouth by Vancouver Canuck goalie Glen Hanlon during Wednesday's National Hockey League game in Chicago. That's defenceman Kevin McCarthy (25) coming in to help Hanlon. Canucks won game 5-2. (AP Wirephoto).

Times News Services

The turnstiles at Chicago Stadium soon may be admitting new faces, but not all of them will belong to fans.

Black Hawk coach Eddie Johnston said some changes were in order after his team absorbed a 5-2 National Hockey League beating Wednesday at the hands of the Smythe Division-leading Vancouver Canucks.

"We went over the team personnel after the game in contemplating some changes," said Johnston. "It's no secret that many of the players are not putting out 100 per cent.

"If things don't turn around in the next couple of games we will make some moves, but it is obvious to us that to get people back into the stadium we are going to have to make some kind of change," he said.

Vancouver's big guns Wednesday were centre Don Lever, who scored two goals and picked up an assist, and linemate Curt Fraser, the former Victoria Cougar who scored once and assisted on another tally.

The win extended the Canucks' Smythe Division lead over Chicago to six points and was Vancouver's third in four games on the road trip.

Vancouver coach Harry Neale expressed surprise "that we have been able to handle the Hawks so well, but this is one rink where we have always done well."

Lever's three-point outing moved the Vancouver captain to within three points of the club's all-time career scoring record held by Andre Boudrias.

While the Canucks were giving Vancouver fans something to cheer about, Bobby Hull, who hadn't shot a puck at an NHL goaltender in eight years, brought Winnipeg Jet supporters to their feet in Winnipeg.

The Golden Jet, who played for 15 years with Chicago Black Hawks before jumping to the World Hockey Association after the 1971-72 season, scored his first two goals since returning to the NHL as the Jets edged Hartford Whalers 3-2.

The performance overshadowed, for most of the 12,736 fans at the Winnipeg Arena, the game-winner by Peter Sullivan and the euphoric performance of Hartford goaltender John Garrett.

In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs triumphed 7-2 over St. Louis Blues, Anders Hedberg scored twice to lift New York Rangers past Detroit Red Wings 3-2 and Minnesota North Stars romped over Quebec Nordiques, 7-2.

Hull, playing his fourth game since returning to the Jets, admitted he tried to crack the lineup before he was ready.

"I was unfair to myself and unfair to the team, trying to force myself into the lineup as quickly as I did," Hull said. "Really, I shouldn't have maybe been getting into the lineup until about now."

Garrett, meanwhile, was almost unbeatable as he faced 32 shots in the Hartford net.

The Leafs, who had been threatened with a wholesale shakeup by general mangeer Punch Imlach if they didn't shake a prolonged scoring slump, have tallied 28 goals in their current win streak.

Irate Shupe turfed out

Times News Services

When it comes to paying fines, Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe isn't in the same league as Pat Ginnell of Medicine Hat Tigers or Ernie McLean of New Westminster.

In 10 years as coach of a major junior hockey club, Shupe always has finished with the "also-rans" in the payout (and/or suspension) race.

It is unlikely he will overhaul Ginnell, this year's clear-cut leader in the Western League's fines department, but Shupe almost certainly will become a member of the payout club as the result of his actions Wednesday in Lethbridge.

Incensed over some of referee Joe Wensink's callings in the first period, Shupe was ejected from the game but not before pulling his team from the ice, momentarily, and becoming embroiled in a heated debate and shoving match with rival executives.

Cougars, giving up more than four goals in one game for the first time this season, lost the game, 6-2, to Lethbridge Broncos.

The flareup occured at the 11:45 mark of the first period when Barry Pederson, Victoria's leading point-getter, and Dennis Labbe of Lethbridge squared off at the side of the Cougar goal. Victoria netminder Kevin Eastman, who may have precipitated the fight by slashing at the Bronco forward, also became involved.

Wensink, however, saw it differently.

He assessed Eastman and Labbe with fighting majors and tagged the Victoria netminder with an additional minor for slashing. Wensink also handed Pederson a major for fighting and a game misconduct for being "the third man in."

When Shupe insisted on debating Wensink's call against Pederson, who had scored Victoria's first goal on a power play, Cougars were assessed a bench minor for delay of game. Shupe persisted and was ejected with a gross misconduct, adding another minor penalty to Victoria's total.

He ordered the team off the ice, and that brought on another minor delay-of-game penalty.

Trailing 2-1, the Cougars returned to the ice with the prospect of playing shorthanded two men for five straight minutes. The fired-up Cougars killed the penalties in brilliant fashion and tied the game when Bob Jansch scored a short-handed goal.

But that marked the end of Victoria's offense. Duane Sutter broke the deadlock at the start of the second. Doug Morrison, Kelly Rissling and Sutter, again, added goals later to put the game out of reach and deal the Cougars their second straight defeat, but only the fourth of the season.

Despite the loss, Cougars retained their four-point advantage atop the Western Division when the charging Seattle Breakers upset the second-place Winter Hawks 8-3 in Portland.

In Wednesday's only other game, Regina Pats blanked Great Falls Americans, 6-0. The victories by Lethbridge and Regina added to the great traffic jam atop the Eastern Division. Only two points separate the top six teams.

Of horses and courses

The thoroughbreds have gone, some to Portland, but most to the farm for the winter and until next spring at Exhibition Park. The trotters are next for Sandown in the spring, and until then there is always Cloverdale to keep one's interest alive in horsey happenings.

And they do go on . . . and on . . .

Cloverdale has a bright new plant this fall and an interesting time to visit the facilities could be next Thursday. For, on that day, Ron Waples, the leading harness racing driver in North America will be a guest driver at the track. Waples has been in the top 10 harness drivers for the past two years, has earned something like $7 million lifetime, $1 million this year, had 341 victories at last count and is rated as one of the all-time best.

And all he has to do at Cloverdale is beat Keith Linton and Joe Hudon, who are up to their old tricks and again battling for driving honors, and Clarence Gagnon, who has won the first five stake races.

Otherwise, another Canadian, Herve Filion, is still the world's winningest driver and he's close behind Waples (about 10) this year, or was at the time of the last official release.

So, which are easier to handicap — the flats or the trots? That question came up at Sandown, and it would appear the thoroughbreds probably run a little better to form for the simple reason that a clever harness driver, or a pair of drivers working together, can do more to block off another horse (and driver) than is the case in thoroughbred racing, all other factors being more or less equal.

On the other hand, with eight-horse fields in sulky racing, you can more or less toss out the No. 7 post, unless it has an outstanding entry, as a consideration for wagering purposes. The percentage of winners from that post two years ago in North America was only 4.6 per cent.

Incidentally, the percentage of winning favorites at the Capital City Turf Club meeting was about 34 per cent and the percentage of favorites in the money 69 per cent. All of which figures. But, as for the mutuel money totals, it really didn't matter how many horses were entered in races, it was how many patrons were at the track that made all the difference in the wagering in the opinion of racing secretary Aubrey Davies. It was Davies' contention that people will bet on anything, but they have to be there first; and that, according to Davies, is one of the problems that has faced Sandown in the past couple of years. Fewer people.

On the other hand, the trend in harness racing at Calgary this year showed the attendance about static but with a 23.5 per cent increase in the mutuel handle. So who really knows? Of course, those Calgarians have more money (and soon will be getting even more, thanks to Joe and his boys) than us real Westerners, and maybe that's why a new thoroughbred plant is being studied in the Alberta boom-town. The feeling is that the plant should be apart from the Stampede grounds, because of parking and access problems when other events are on the Stampede grounds and also because Calgarians, who have been setting betting records each season, want more room in which to do it.

But back to the jugheads — despite the success of the sulkies in nearly every part of the nation, Saskatchewan and Manitoba have gone against the flow. At Saskatoon this year, only 175 horses turned up for a 16-day meeting which produced a dismal $48,000 daily average, while at Regina a scheduled meet was cancelled altogether because of a shortage of horses. And the CCTC thought it had a problem! Assiniboia Downs in Winnipeg dropped the sulkies two years ago.

On the other side of that coin, the thoroughbreds have been booming in Saskatoon, Regina and Winnipeg.

As to the future here who knows? Still, one fact that struck home at Sandown this season was that the feeling persists among B.C. horsemen that off-track wagering in Canada will soon form a future pattern in the industry and is more or less assured. But that was a promise of the Liberals a few years ago, too, wasn't it?

No rules bent here —Shields

By JIM CRERAR

Success breeds success. It also breeds suspicion, as UVic Viking basketball coach Ken Shields is discovering.

Shields is preparing the Vikings, winners twice last weekend over Lethbridge Pronghorns, for their first home series of the Canada West University Athletic Association season Friday and Saturday at McKinnon gym.

He's doing so amid innuendos that he's bending recruiting rules.

Not so, he replies to queries in Thunder Bay, Ont., as to why Sudbury's Ilario Pasquale is playing guard for the Vikings instead of the hometown Laurentian University Vees.

And there are some raised eyebrows over at UBC where a press release this week refers to UVic's import-packed basketball team.

Canada West rules allow a school to recuit only within its own province.

"You're darn right I recruit," Shields said Wednesday. "It's my responsibility to try to convince kids that this is the best university in B.C.

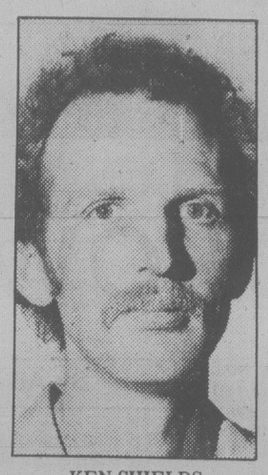

"I tried to recruit Greg Wiltjer (who helped lead Parkland Panthers to city and Island high school titles last season) and I'm hopeful Quinn Groenheyde will come here next year."

Groenheyde, another Parkland star, is playing senior "B" basketball this winter and is back at high school to improve his grades.

But Shields, who coached basketball at Laurentian before coming to UVic in 1976-77, maintains he did not recruit any of Vikings' five out-of-province players. Besides Pasquale, a freshman, they are Billy Loos, a fifth-year guard from Connecticut; fifth-year forward Rene Dolcetti who attended St. Charles College in Sudbury before playing two years for Laurentian; second-year forward Bruce Hamilton from the Sudbury-area town of Capreol, and third-year guard Tom Narbeshuber from Oakville, Ont.

"Rene (Dolcetti) had played for me at Laurentian and was unhappy with the way things were going there," said Shields. "He phoned me in the spring of my first year here (1977) and I told him to wait until the summer before making up his mind."

KEN SHIELDS
. . . coach answers critics

RENE DOLCETTI
. . . wanted to come here

Dolcetti phoned a second time and Shields put him off again.

"I told him that if at the end of the summer he was still determined to leave Laurentian, contact me then."

Dolcetti stuck to his guns about leaving and Shields let Laurentian officials know right away what had happened.

With Loos, it was simply a case of moving here with his wife, Carol Turney Loos. The two met while Carol was playing for the national team at St. Mary's University in Halifax. She wanted to return to the west coast and contacted UVic Vikette coach Kathy Shields. Billy accompanied her west.

What about Pasquale?

"I'd known him since he was in elementary school," Shields said. "He practically lived in the Laurentian gym. When I left Sudbury, he said perhaps some day he'd come out to Victoria to play."

Pasquale contacted Shields when he finished high school.

"I had very mixed feelings," Shields said. "It had come down to a choice between here and Laurentian and one of my former players, Mike Heale, was coaching at Laurentian. It just was not a good situation for me."

In the end, Pasquale asked Shields to list UVic's good points, presumably doing the same with Heale, and chose to come west.

Shields makes one point clear.

"When I came here from Laurentian I didn't encourage any of the players to come with me. I told them to stay together in Sudbury."

Hamilton wrote Shields but got no guarantees about playing. In fact, Shields suggested other schools and Hamilton played at Saskatchewan last season.

He contacted Shields again last July about transferring to UVic but Shields and Saskatchewan coach Guy Vitrie urged him to stay put. When Vitrie resigned as coach in August, however, Hamilton made the switch.

Narbeshuber was recruited out of Oakville by Simon Fraser Clansmen. But unhappy over the fact that he wasn't playing, Narbeshuber got in touch with Shields last November. Shields in turn talked to SFU athletic director Lorne Davies and Narbeshuber crossed the strait with no trouble.

"There were no problems, no allegations of tampering," Shields said.

Pasquale will be a starting guard Friday and Saturday against Alberta Golden Bears, coached this year by Brian Heaney who guided St. Mary's to last spring's Canadian college championship over UVic.

Narbeshuber, sidelined with a foot ailment, will dress but missing will be guard Ian Hyde-Lay, out at least until December with a hairline fracture of his right foot.

Green to coach Caps

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Washington Capitals officials, unhappy with the National Hockey League teams' progress this season, have named Gary Green — at 26 the youngest coach in NHL history — to replace Danny Belisle.

In announcing the dismissal of Belisle as coach Wednesday, general manager Max McNab said: "Management is very disappointed with the progress of the Washington Capitals so far this season and has, therefore, decided a coaching change is necessary."

Green, a native of Tillsonburg, Ont., who had been coaching Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League, assumes his duties tonight when the Capitals meet Boston Bruins in Boston.

Belisle, 42, was hired just 48 hours before the opening of the 1978-79 season. He replaced Tommy McVie.

The Capitals, with a record of 4-10-2 for 10 points, are at the bottom of the tough Patrick Division.

"I don't feel nervous," Green said Wednesday in an interview with the London Free Press. "I haven't had time."

He met with the players at a suburban Washington motel immediately upon his arrival.

"I almost fell off my chair when I saw our schedule," he said. "We leave in the morning for Boston. . . . We're back here Friday against Detroit (Red Wings), practice Saturday, have Atlanta (Flames) here Sunday and then Monday we leave for road games Tuesday in Colorado and Wednesday in Chicago.

A job in the NHL has been uppermost in Green's priorities since he left Peterborough Petes after leading the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League club to the Memorial Cup championship last season.

He was lured away from Peterborough by the Capitals last June for a reported $50,000 a year for two years with the promise that the Washington job would be his. The contract also called for a car, an apartment and an open-end expense account.

NFL 'monument to racism'

BOSTON (AP) — The head of the National Football League Players' Association has circulated a memorandum charging that the league is a "monument to racism," the Boston Globe reported today.

The Globe said it obtained documents sent to player representatives by Ed Garvey, the executive director of the association, assailing discrimination against black players.

The newspaper said Garvey charged that NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle was "responsible for a consistent pattern of racism in the league."

Garvey's strongly worded six-page memorandum, which took issue with a recent fine levied on New England Patriots' cornerback Raymond Clayborn, was sent to team representatives, asking their permission to release the statement, The Globe said.

Rozelle fined Clayborn $2,000 following a locker room tussle with Globe columnist Will McDonough. Garvey charged the fine was racially motivated.

The Globe quoted Garvey's statement as reading: "We now arrive at Raymond Clayborn who allegedly punched a white, Boston Irish sports writer. Could the head of a racist institution give a black player a fair hearing when he allegedly hit a white sports writer? I think the answer is obviously no."

Garvey compared the situation to the death of Steve Biko, a black South African dissident who died while in prison, and to the treatment of blacks in the South.

"Let's face it," he wrote, "the Raymond Clayborn 'trial' is a total farce and reinforcement of the policies of the NFL, the old South and a lot of other discriminatory institutions."

The Globe said Garvey's statement also took the league to task for the scarcity of blacks in positions of responsibility, including league management and coaching positions. He placed the blame on Rozelle.

"He tells us that he is urging owners to hire 'qualified' blacks as coaches but can't explain why so few are hired," Garvey wrote. "Are there no qualified blacks to become general managers? Public relations directors? Head coaches?

"We, the union, believe it is time to stop the hypocrisy."

Father is victim after karate show

max low

Being Remembrance Day, Sunday morning was a peaceful time in most homes, where the inhabitants relaxed and contemplated once more the horrors of war.

But in our household an eight-year-old boy happily threw his father over his shoulder and gave everyone a graphic demonstration of what you do when you're attacked by someone with a butter knife.

For Jason, the morning was a chance to relive the night before — an exciting evening watching the finals of the Bateson Karate School championships in the old UVic gymnasium.

Day-long eliminations amongst the 75 competitors left the best for the night show, which began with a mini display by 10 Black Belt holders of the 27 basic techniques of karate. Techniques which, said Lindon Bateson, who has schools in Victoria (with about 200 members), Parkesville (80 members) and Salt Spring Island (25), have to be practiced over and over again.

"We have now promoted 18 Black Belts, taking people right from White Belt — through Yellow, Orange, Green, Blue and Brown in that order — to Black," Bateson told the large crowd in the gym.

"One we're very proud of is Orv Nickel, who became an instructor in self defence with the RCMP in Regina, so he's making his living out of karate."

Champions of each belt level displayed their winning katas as well as battling it out in the sparring finals.

"A kata is a pre-arranged set of techniques that are practiced in a sequence that has been developed by ancient karate masters," Bateson explained. "Basically, it's a compendium of all the movements in karate. It's the aesthetic part of the sport and what some might refer to as the dance of karate."

As you'd expect, there was lots of action in the sparring events through all the belt levels with the two competitors fighting it out in a small square watched by five judges — one clutching red and white flags on each of the corners and a referee. Three out of the five must signify they've seen a blow delivered before a point is awarded.

Big winner at the tourney was Andy Pruim, an assistant at Bateson's Victoria school who won both the Black Belt kata and sparring over Parksville veteran James (Jimmy Mac) MacDonald, who was trying for a comeback.

And very impressive was Mark Pennington of Victoria, who won both the Blue Belt kata and sparring titles and also carried off the Peter DeHaan Achievement Award. (DeHaan was a club member who was killed in a car accident in 1977 just a few days before he was to be tested for his Black Belt).

Competitors ranged in age down from a few 'oldtimers' to some of just nine or 10. I chatted to Christian Madsen of Colwood, who has just turned 11 and has been learning karate now nearly three years.

Chris wore his yellow belt proudly and told me he'd placed second in the junior kata and third in the sparring.

"We have fun," was his explanation of why he liked karate. "It's a hard workout and it's a good workout."

The youngster, who is also learning springboard diving, used to play hockey.

"But I like this better . . . a whole lot better!" he said. And then, in a very grownup way, Chris added: "I also come to karate because you learn more responsibility and self-discipline."

In between all the competitive stuff, there were demonstrations of wooden board breaking by Black Belt holders, as someone said 'to give the fans an idea of just how much power is being used out there.'

There was the usual board smashing with hand blows (as Bateson pointed out: "You can belt those boards are a lot harder than any rib cage around"), one competitor did a flying leap where he kicked and broke two boards held high above someone's head, and another guy even smashed a board with his forehead — by nodding at it!

Women club members, who competed against each other in sparring events and against the men in team fights, gave an excellent display of self defence, including how to unarm an assailant who comes at you with a knife.

Eight, of course, is a very impressionable age and Jason was no exception. Still glowing from the excitement of it all on the way home, he told me:

"Boy Dad, that was neat!"

Shamrocks get Boyd

Victoria Shamrocks have regained the services of Jim Boyd in a complicated Western Lacrosse Association deal.

The Irish announced Wednesday that draft choice Ron Banister had been sent to New Westminster Salmonbellies in exchange for Boyd and a fourth-round draft choice in 1980.

Boyd, an Esquimalt product who played several games with Victoria last season and scored the winning goal in the Shamrocks' Mann Cup victory over Peterborough Red Oaks, was picked fourth in the junior draft by Nanaimo but reverted to Salmonbellies in a deal arranged between the clubs.

Timbermen, who also picked Tarey Pollock of Esquimalt, had gained the extra draft choice by sending Mike Walsh to New Westminster but the deal was only good if Shamrocks did not draft Banister, a standout goalkeeper with Burnaby.

Victoria then selected Banister and thus forced the deal for Boyd.

LONDON (Reuter) — England striker Tony Woodcock showed Wednesday why West German club FC Cologne is prepared to pay Nottingham Forest $1,365,000 for him by playing an inspiring role in Forest's 3-0 home win over Bristol City in an English Football League Cup fourth round replay.

Woodcock, still mulling over a lucrative contract with Cologne, scored Forest's third goal, in the 62nd minute.

Martin O'Neill gave the European champions and League Cup holders the lead in the 11th minute. Viv Anderson scored the second goal three minutes before the half.

Victoria Alderman

DEAR VICTORIA RESIDENT:

Every two years we elect a new municipal government. How we elect our officials is what makes our democratic system work. In Victoria issues seem hard to come by, but now, more importantly than ever, we must realize that Victoria has to adapt to the world of the 1980's.

We must retain Victoria's unique character and charm; but at the same time our tourist industry must be ready to meet the new realities of energy shortages and inflation; and Victoria must encourage year round industry to help ease seasonal unemployment.

As a community we must work together to reach solutions that are based on co-operation with all parties rather than conflict. We have an obligation to work with each other to improve the lot of every level in society.

The coming decade will be challenging for Victoria, and no politician should make promises he knows he cannot keep; therefore it is imperative that we elect strong officials who remember that they are public servants first, and politicians last. On November 17th, I hope you will support my candidacy for Alderman, and Let's build Victoria for tomorrow.

Yours Truly,
Dermod Travis

CINCINNATI (AP) — Nancy Lopez and Tom Watson are the 1979 players of the year as selected by the Golf Writers Association of America.

Both players are repeat winners and it is the third consecutive year that Watson has received the honor.

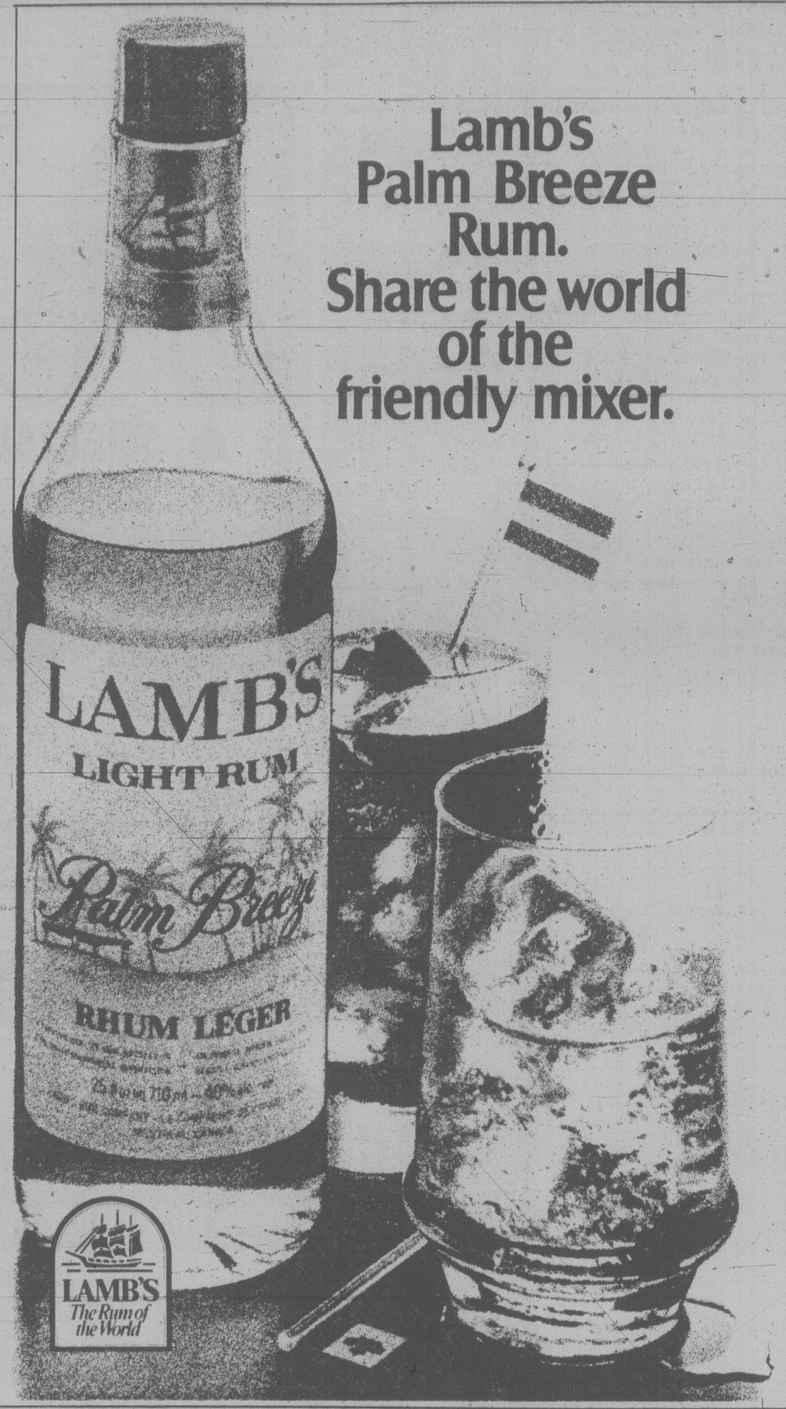

Association officials said Lopez was an overwhelming winner among members of the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour.

Soderholm deal approved

NEW YORK (AP) — The on-again, off-again trade of third baseman Eric Soderholm from Texas Rangers to New York Yankees was on again Wednesday after some hasty reshuffling.

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office had blocked the original deal after the Rangers released the names of the three minor leaguers they were to receive for Soderholm. Then, Kuhn's office approved the revised transaction, which, the Yankees said, eventually could be identical to the deal that was blocked.

Originally, the Yankees were to obtain Soderholm for pitchers Roger Slagle and Ricky Burdette and infielder Amos Lewis. But that transaction was kayoed because minor league rosters are currently frozen.

Rapp's priority to beef up lines

VANCOUVER (CP) — Upgrading the offensive and defensive lines with better imports will be the top priority of British Columbia Lions before the 1980 Canadian Football League season, head coach Vic Rapp said Wednesday.

"We've got a 'hell of chance to be a great team next season if we can get the right linemen," Rapp said in an interview. "Right now, import-wise, we're not as strong as other teams at some positions in both lines."

Rapp was reflecting on the roller-coaster season of the Lions, who for much of the 1979 season were near the top of the Western Conference standings.

But, after being 9-2-1, B.C. lost its last four games to finish third and then the Lions were humiliated 37-2 by second-place Calgary Stampeders in the West semi-final Nov. 10.

"Calgary was a better team physically than us going into the game because of all the injuries we've had," Rapp said. "I'm not making excuses for our showing, but everyone knows we were beat up at key positions.

"We tried to play on emotion and most of the players gave it their best. But there were a few who didn't and it's the job of this coaching staff to make sure that it doesn't happen again."

Rapp has a three-year coaching record of 20-19-3 here, which puts him at the head of the B.C. class; he's the only coach in the 26-year history of the team with a winning record.

The head coach has been accused of being too emotional at times on the field and of berating his players during practice sessions. It's a climate which Rapp claims is necessary to be successful.

The club's board of directors met Wednesday and renewed the contract of general manager Bob Ackles for two years. Ackles said he would discuss Rapp's contract "soon" and expressed "full confidence" in the coach.

Rapp was the CFL's coach of the year in 1977 when Lions wound up with a 10-6 record.

The Lions were cruising along in high gear this season before injuries took away quarterback Jerry Tagge after the eighth game and middle linebacker Sam Britts in the 12th start. B.C. also lost four Canadian defensive tackles with injuries at different times, with only Nick Hebeler hobbling back into the lineup at the end of the season.

"I can't say enough about how much it hurt us not to have the vast experience of Tagge and Britts in the lineup," said Rapp. "Tagge is a leader and we found out, when he wasn't in there, just how great a leader he really is on the field.

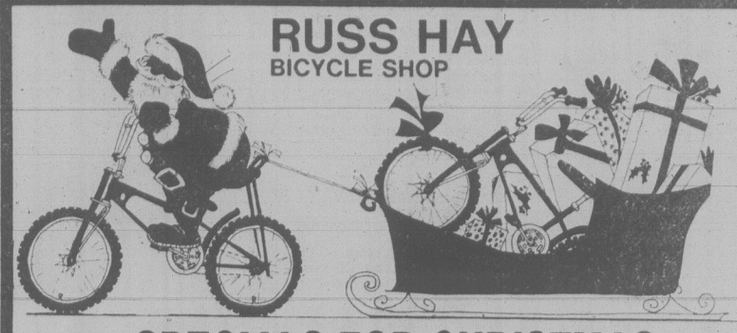

"We also missed Britts because he's the quarterback of the defence. We didn't win another game after he was injured."

Rookie Joe Paopao played quarterback for the second half of the season and set a CFL record with 18 straight completions in a game against Toronto Argonauts. Over a two-game period, the "Throwin' Samoan" completed 35 of 40 passes.

His inexperience showed at the end of the season, however, when he was unable to cope with blitzing defences.

"Paopao did a good job, considering his limited experience," Rapp said. "He's a star of the future in this league and he'll get more playing time again next season."

Girls can't play with men

MIAMI (AP) — Jane Blalock and Doug Sanders say they agree on one thing: women golfers can't compete equally with men.

"I'll never wave a banner and say that women are equal to men," said Blalock, a 10-year veteran of the Ladies Professional Golf Association. "It's just not the truth. I'd just like to reach the point where we're viewed as fellow competitors, not just a bunch of dumb broads.

"I'd like to reach the point where we have mutual admiration for each other."

Blalock, of Highland Beach, Fla., and Sanders are preparing for the $100,000 Johnny Miller Invitational Dec. 10-11 at Bonaventure, Fla., in which 35 LPGA players will compete against 35 PGA players.

Sanders, noted for his flamboyance on and off the men's tour, says he's ready to accept women, but not as equals on the golf course.

"I have all the respect in the world for women," he told the Miami Herald in an interview from Houston.

"They've got those cute little bodies and those cute little voices. But there's no question that men are superior on the golf course. I think both realize that."

"Realistically, there's no way a woman can win," said LPGA player Marlene Floyd. "They say they're going to move the tee markers up so the men and women drive to the same point in the fairway. But if a man's 150 yards away, he'll use an eight-iron and a woman will need a five-iron."

The pros say the tournament will give them a chance to get alongside some more appealing company.

"It'll be fun playing next to all those good-looking men," Blalock said, although adding: "I don't get off too much on the men versus women idea. I feel their superior strength is unquestioned."

"Anytime I can get a chance to play next to all those pretty ladies — well, shoot, I just love that," Sanders said. "But seriously, it's about time we had something different to create more interest in golf. Golf needs a boot in the butt, and this sounds just right."

Ottawa says land deal 'political'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice Minister Jacques Flynn or Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp could become key witnesses in a court action by a Vancouver Indian band against the federal government.

The Musqueam band is suing the government for $71 million in damages and the amount of money the band says it would have obtained had the government leased 162 acres of band land to the Shaughnessy Golf Club at a realistic market value.

In a surprise move at the end of the month-long federal court trial Wednesday, band lawyer Marvin Storrow insisted on calling either Epp or Flynn to explain the government's amended defence that its actions on behalf of the band were political and beyond the reach of any court.

Government lawyer Gunnar Eggertson argued in his final submission this week that there was neither a legal nor moral trust between the Indians and the government, only a political trust.

The Indians claim that by leasing the land to the golf club without advertising it, without making the band aware of the lease terms and without telling the band of other offers to develop it, government representatives violated their commitment to get the best possible arrangements for the land.

Storrow said the defence of political trust has never been used in Canadian courts.

"The implications of a court of law upholding this defence are astounding. By defending this action on the basis of political trust, the government is saying to the Indian peoples 'we can control your lives through the Indian Act, we can control your lands, we can do things to affect your lives that we cannot do to any other group in Canada, and when we do these things you have absolutely no recourse to the courts.'"

Mr. Justice Frank Collier agreed with Storrow that if political trust is used as a defence, the highest elected officials should appear before the courts to explain the government's position.

The government must formally amend its defence to include political trust by Nov. 21.

Inuit angered by Epp's move

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet is going to push native land claims "back into the dark ages and set the stage for tremendous confrontation in the Northwest Territories," members of an Inuit group said Wednesday.

And Northern Affairs Minister Jake Epp is "too weak. . . to put his head on the block for natives." Sam Raddi, president of the Committee for Original People's Entitlement, said in an interview.

The committee, representing 2,500 Western Arctic Inuit, has been angered by Epp's refusal to honor an agreement-in-principle signed with the previous Liberal government over land claims. A final agreement was to have been signed Nov. 1.

Cabinet is currently reviewing land claims worth more than $3 billion and it could result in a tougher government stand on what natives receive in settlements, said Bob Delury, the committee's aboriginal rights spokesman.

"And that will force groups in the territories to become more radical politically," Delury said.

Princess lists some sad facts on world's starving children

TORONTO (CP) — At a $50-a-plate dinner attended by 2,500 people Wednesday, Princess Anne, chairman of the International Save The Children Fund, said facts about the state of children in the Third World do not make good reading.

"Facts and figures show that 400 million children go to bed hungry in this world, and two-thirds of a million are dying every day in places such as Cambodia."

The princess is in Ontario on a six-day visit to participate in functions raising money for the Canadian Save The Children Fund. She was introduced by singer Anne Murray, honorary chairman of the Canadian Save The Children Fund.

She sat between the former chairman of the Canadian Save the Children Fund, Mary Lemesurier, and Ms. Murray. Maureen McTeer, wife of Prime Minister Clark, sat beside Emmett Cardinal Carter of Toronto.

Princess Anne, 29, arrived earlier Wednesday from Kingston aboard a Canadian Forces aircraft amid snow-flurries and a chilling wind.

Wednesday was her sixth wedding anniversary but her husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, is not with her on the visit.

She was welcomed by Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon prior to inspecting the guard of honor by the 70 Communications Group inside a hangar at the Downsview air base.

The route taking the princess to downtown Toronto was lined every half mile with Ontario Provincial Police and members of the Metropolitan Toronto force, which one tour official said was not an unusual security precaution when royalty visits Canada.

At Nathan Phillips Square, Princess Anne was greeted by Premier William Davis, Mayor John Sewell and Paul Godfrey, Metro Toronto chairman.

The princess appeared relaxed and happy as she sat for nearly 30 minutes with officials on a raised dais watching a group of Toronto celebrities take part in a fund-raising Kick for Cansave ceremony.

Participants kicked a football across the square to raise money for the fund.

She seemed particularly amused and clapped her gloved hands enthusiastically when Davis, once a member of University of Toronto Varsity Blues, kicked the ball 33 yards.

Little time for public to view Rosalynn

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rosalynn Carter, wife of United States President Carter, arrives today for a two-day visit to Winnipeg where she will be honored for her work with the mentally ill.

She is to be presented with the St. Boniface Hospital Research Foundation's International Humanitarian Award. Previous winners were the Duke of Edinburgh, Dr. Christiaan Barnard and Dr. Jonas Salk.

Mrs. Carter will be presented with the award at a fund-raising banquet tonight. Maureen McTeer, wife of Prime Minister Clark, also will attend the dinner at the Winnipeg Convention Centre.

After she speaks at the banquet, Mrs. Carter will go to Government House where she will attend a reception given by Lt.-Gov. and Mrs. F. L. Jobin.

She will spend the night at Government House and Friday morning will dedicate the new psychiatric wing of the St. Boniface General Hospital.

Her work in the field of mental health began in 1970 when her husband was governor of Georgia.

She served on a commisson to improve services for the mentally and emotionally handicapped and as honorary chairman of the Georgia Special Olympics.

To gain first-hand knowledge of the problems of the mentally ill, she worked as a volunteer at the Georgia Regional Hospital in Atlanta.

The public's only chance to see Mrs. Carter will be when she dedicates the hospital wing Friday morning.

'Kind of cute' bank robber finally nabbed

MONTREAL (CP) — A young woman believed responsible for eight bank robberies in the last month — including four at branches of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce — was arrested Tuesday in the city's north end, police said.

The 21-year-old woman, described by a police detective as "kind of cute," had been the object of an intense police investigation since the robbery spree began Oct. 15.

Police said she concentrated on the downtown area and only once worked with an accomplice. That partnership ended when her friend turned the wrong way after a raid on a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch and ran smack into a traffic cop.

Power plant 'a slap in face'

HELENA, Mont. (UPC) — Montana state authorities are concerned about an announcement that the Saskatchewan government plans to proceed with construction of the 300-megawatt Coronach power plant six kilometers north of the border.

United States Sen. Max Baucus labelled the decision "a slap in the face to the residents of northeastern Montana who have participated in good faith before the IJC (International Joint Commission) hearings."

"I urge the Saskatchewan Power officials to reconsider this shortsighted and ill-conceived decision," said the senator.

Lieutenant-Governor Ted Schwinden said he understands the Saskatchewan government's duty to "address the energy requirements of its province," but added he will ask the U.S. State Department to "relay the concerns of the state of Montana to the government of Canada."

J.R. Messer, the provincial minister responsible for the Saskatchewan Power Corp., said Wednesday the $170 million project would be started even though the IJC has yet to make public a report it is preparing on the environmental effects of the project.

A 300-megawatt unit already on the same location is slated to begin producing electricity next year.

The state of Montana contends that waste from the plant and a dam at the site will result in higher levels of pollution in the Poplar River, a tiny waterway which flows south toward Scobey, Mont., about 20 kilometers south of the border, and through farm and ranchlands to the southeast.

Haiti immigration smugglers caught

MONTREAL (CP) — The RCMP immigration squad has broken up a ring of Haitians who have been smuggling fellow countrymen, posing as "tourists" in Quebec, across the border into the United States, police said Wednesday.

In a series of raids during the last two days, Mounties said they carried out 10 searches and arrested four Haitians living in the Montreal area.

The network would contact the Haitian tourists when they arrived in Montreal and would drive them to rural points on the Quebec-Maine and Quebec-Vermont borders, leading them on trails into the U.S. They were then taken to New York.

When the Bolshoi's here please, let there be light

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It's improbable that any of the 15 dancers of the Mini-Bolshoi company ever heard the Schwartz-Dietz song, Dancing in the Dark. But intermittantly that is just what they were doing Wednesday at the Royal Theatre.

The appalling deficencies of the Royal's antiquated equipment, especially the stage lighting, was never more evident or more irritating to all concerned.

A near sell-out audience had come to see what was purported to be some pretty top-level classical ballet, and most of it was indeed that — if we could only have seen it other than dimly.

Infuriating black areas on the stage kept swallowing the dancers; when a badly focused spot finally picked out the Swan Queen she was bathed in a ghastly green-white light and throughout, when the spot favored one dancer, her partner, by virtue of no light, was eliminated.

This is an international company of some distinction; exceptionally talented people, superbly trained representing the finest traditions of Russian ballet.

Having just completed performances at Vancouver's Queen Elizabeth and on Duncan's modern beautifully lit Cowichan Community Centre stage, they move on to the capital city of B.C. and what do they find? The dark ages.

The program planned for Victoria was a memorial tribute to Tchaikowksy; excerpted scenes from his Swan Lake, Sleeping Beauty and Romeo and Juliet. However, before the performance began impressario Allen Houghton announced that the last two could not be performed due to the lighting inadequacies of the Royal.

Divertissments, a Don Quixote excerpt, and part of the third act of Swan Lake were substituted.

There is no doubt at all that the substituted program was just as lovely and enjoyable as the one originally intended. Nor is there any doubt that tonight's audience will be treated to more of the disciplined richly classical dancing.

It will probably even have slightly less problems than Wednesday's did. By the second half of Wednesday's program whoever was being so fumble-fingered in operating what light was available had managed to get the hang of things and there was a slight improvement.

The changes in programming do not help to sort out who danced what and perhaps that is not necessary.

Two lovely slender premier ballerinas shone in the Black Swan Odile and Don Quixote pas de deux but there were other female dancers of equal merit and beauty. A pair of them were sheerly delightful in Ocean of Pearls, and a divertissment that included Russian, Ukrainian and gypsy dances was rendered with spirit, charm and passion as well as faultless technique.

The automaton-like opening from the first act of Swan Lake, did not prepare one for the lyrical qualities and virtuosity that was to follow but the dancers must surely have been emotionally handicapped by the stage situation.

With the exception of the premier danseur in the role of Prince Siegfried, who was ponderous, the male dancers are of top caliber, executing the difficult tours en l'air, the pirouettes and jetes fluently and with spirit.

The enchanting pas de quatre of the Swan Lake cygnets was delectable and one was constantly marvelling at the perfection of poise and balance, the brilliant pointe work, the delicacy, animation and beauty of line exhibited by all the ballerinas.

18th-century German music offered

Late 18th century German music is the focus of Victoria Conservatory of Music's second early music concert by La Confrerie St.Julien.

It will take place Friday at Craigdarroch Castle.

Representing the older, conservative style of the baroque is the Suite No.1 in G Major by J.S. Bach. This work which shows the influence of the French court dances, will feature cellist James Hunter. Music by Bach's sons, Johann Christian and Wilhelm Friedmann, will be played by James Knnedy, baroque flute, and Sydney Humphreys, violin.

These are duets which show a more progressive modern style with mixed rhythms and sudden changes of harmony.

A double concerto by C.H. Graun will feature solo recorder and violin in a high-spirited example of virtuoso music by a neglected but once highly regarded composer. A flute sonata by a similarly neglected Czech composer, Franz Benda, will be performed.

Music that existed until quite recently only in manuscript form, due to an edict by the composer's patron, the Austrian Emporer, is by 18th century court composer Jan Dismas Zelenka. A work by Zelenka is included in the program.

Concert time is 8 p.m.

Envoys swapped

LONDON (Reuter) — Argentina and Britain have decided to exchange ambassadors after a four-year gap, British officials said.

Co-operation yields results

Artistic organizations are often accused of pulling in different directions, of failure to join forces. That, while sometimes true, is like most generalizations - faulty.

A perfect example of co-operation between two major organizations is at hand. The Belfry musical which opens tonight, Side By Side By Sondheim, needed two grand pianos.

The Victoria Conservatory of Music has many pianos. But it's an almost unknown occurence to find even five minutes free time on one piano let alone two idle grands.

As it happens, concurrent with the final phase of preparing Side By Side, the Conservatory is planning the big move — from the long-outgrown but much appreciated space in Craigdarroch Castle to more than 50 studio and administrative areas in the St.Ann's Academy Annex made available by the provincial government.

Among other equipment, 39 new pianos had to be ordered. The early arrival of two eased the present demand for pianos in the conservatory.

It couldn't have happened at a better time for Don Shipley and the Belfry.

With the ready concurrence of Ron Alexander, president of the VCM board, music adminstrator Christine Mather and principals Robin and Winifred Wood, Belfry audiences for the next two weeks will hear the lyrical Sondheim music performed by Roger Perkins and Robert Donison on two matched Yamaha grands.

Paddy Stewart, Belfry president, is arranging a special benefit performance in December with the proceeds to be split between the Belfry and Conservatory.

Sealey swats Chamber criticisms

She reminded aldermen of their duty after the Sidney chamber criticized her for not communicating with it.

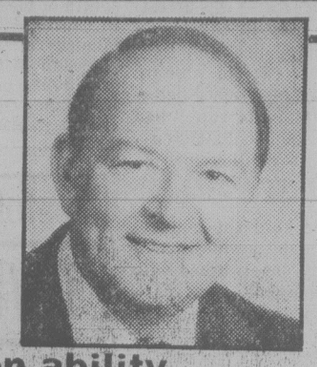

The mayor said the chamber's criticisms are unfounded.

She said the correspondence shows too much time is spent on chamber-related business.

Vinton going after movie career

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The grass is greener department, singer division:

Bobby Vinton wants to become a movie star, no matter how big a cut in salary it means to him.

Vinton's first faltering step toward becoming a leading man is a role in "The Gossip Columnist," a television movie due for release next year.

The "Polish Prince" of song earns more money than all but of a handful of movie stars. But he is discontent with being a simple multi-millionaire troubador. Bobby wants to broaden his horizons.

He got his first taste of movies back in 1965. He was at the height of his teeny bopper fame, voted male vocalist of the decade, when he starred in "Surf Party." He was paid $600 by American International Pictures.

"I couldn't believe my salary," Vinton recalled. "I thought all movie stars were paid in the millions. But my agent assured me I had to start out small like all the other film stars even if I was the hottest singer around.

"That picture was ironic. I was living in New York when it was released. I rented the film from AIP to show to all my friends and relatives. I was so proud of the movie I kept it for six months, running it for everybody.

"After I'd had the picture six months AIP sent me a bill for $2,000 rental. I told them it was more than three times what I got paid in the first place.

"I won't say it was a great film. The last day I had it, I invited the neighborhood kids in for cake and candy and to watch the picture. I started it for them and then went to answer a telephone.

"When I got back, they were gone and only my German shepherd was watching the screen. And the next day he bit me. Honest. That's a true story."

Bobby forgot his movie career. He continued cutting hit records and playing nightclubs to full houses. But he'd ceased being a superstar.

Eight or nine years ago he landed a role in "Big Jake," starring John Wayne. He was killed off in the first 10 minutes. Wayne, however, took a shine to Bobby and gave him a bigger part in "The Train Robbers."

"After the second Wayne picture I decided to get into movies and live like a movie star," Vinton said. "I moved from New York and bought one of the biggest houses in Southern California.

"I call it the Polish Palace. It was once owned by Cary Grant and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. It's so big I've never counted all the rooms."

There followed an eight-year dry spell. Not a single movie.

When his career waned, he spent $50,000 of his own money producing a song titled "My Melody of Love," an ethnic-sounding ballad which galvanized fans around the world.

The advent of Polish jokes and Bobby's admission that he was Polish and proud of it hyped his career even more. Minorities of every breed flocked to his concerts, buying copies of the recording which became a new Polish anthem.

"I came out with a positive stand about being Polish," Bobby said. "Then other Poles stood up and quit backing away from their roots.

"Now I play Las Vegas 20 weeks a year and the salary is fantastic. Nothing in show business pays off like starring in Vegas. But I was still determined to make it as a leading man in movies."

Every few weeks Bobby telephoned his agents who told him they submitted his name for movie roles regularly but that he was turned down time and again because he "wasn't right for the parts."

For years Bobby accepted his agents' excuses. Earlier this year Bobby called to tell them, "I want a picture and I want one now. I'm thinking of changing agents."

The next day he was sent a script for "The Gossip Columnist."

Some Thoughts About NEIGHBORHOODS

GENTRY HUDSON
Victoria's neighborhoods are the heart of this community. They are, however, threatened by the high cost of home repair and renovation. Interest rates on loans for such purposes are prohibitive and therefore increasingly inaccessible. Victoria City Council should act to nullify this threat. What better way to solve the problem than for Victoria to establish a Neighborhood Protection Bank which would lend money for home repair and renovation purposes?
Here Is How It Would Work!
Victoria would underwrite a bond issue of $100 million on the open market at prevailing rates of interest. Owner occupied householders could borrow up to $20,000.00 for a five-year term at half the rate paid to borrow the money originally.
What About the Difference Between The Rate At Which The Money Was Borrowed And That At Which It Would Be Lent?
Simple! Victoria makes it up in Property Taxes generated by the increased value of the houses due to the repairs and renovations involved.
Impractical? Irresponsible?
Not at all! A similar arrangement is working today to revive neighborhoods in Baltimore, Md. And if such an innovative idea is good enough for southern U.S. neighborhoods, it's good enough for Victoria, B.C., neighborhoods, also.

'Dream' partnership beautiful

TORONTO (CP) — Britain's Anthony Dowell and Canada's Veronica Tennant formed a beautiful partnership Wednesday night as The Royal Ballet star made his first guest appearance with The National Ballet of Canada.

The pairing proved to be a natural one as they danced together for the first time in The Dream, the Sir Frederick Ashton one-act ballet adapted from Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

When Ashton choreographed the work in 1964 to mark the dramatist's 400th birthday, he chose Dowell to create the role of Oberon, King of Fairyland.

Now, 15 years later, it remains clear why the choreographer was attracted to Dowell. He's elegant and witty, essential characteristics required in Ashton's ballets.

Dowell showed why he is considered one of the best male classical dancers in the world as he used a flowing, strong technique and a good sense of gesture to create an excellent portrayal of the haughty, meddling king.

Discwasher® D3 Fluid
D3 Record Cleaning Fluid is Discwasher's famous "totally engineered" liquid. The D3 Fluid removes fingerprints and common disc contaminants while protecting vinyl additives which are necessary for long record life. Non-coating — all you get after used is a clean record.

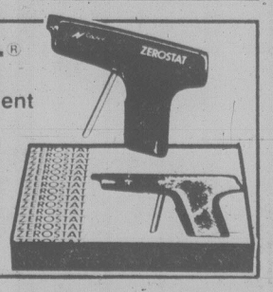

SC-1™ Stylus Cleaner
Discwasher® SC-1™ Stylus Cleaner is a precision instrument with a large diameter nylon brush and a magnifying mirror which retract into an integral walnut case. The calculated density of the SC-1™ brush provides thousands of cleaning tip surfaces for proper and convenient stylus cleaning.

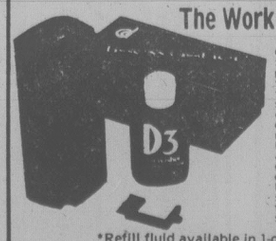

DiscKit™
Discwasher® Disckit is total record care in lifetime storage. Disckit combines the essential Discwasher® record care products in a beautifully milled walnut tray with dustcover, at substantial savings over the same products purchased separately.

ZEROSTAT® Anti-Static Instrument
Discwasher® Zerostat® Anti-Static instrument is an effective, safe device for audiophiles and photographers. Zerostat eliminates static on virtually any surface . . . without clogging residues, cartridges to replace, cords, plugs or radioactivity. Zerostat treats large surfaces of any polar charge by showering both positive charges (trigger squeeze) and negative charges (trigger release) — the result will give you no static.

The Working System

Only the Discwasher Record Cleaning System with DC-1 gives immediate performance, long-term record safety, and pleasing physical characteristics. Discwasher D3 System was described by a British audio journal in a comparative test of 18 record cleaners: Both sticky deposits, finger marks and dust on the record were lifted efficiently by the Discwasher, and even particles lodged in the grooves and micro-dust in the bottom of the grooves were cleaned up excellently. The view through the microscope was uncanny, as it was difficult to believe that the disc had ever been sprinkled with dirt.
*Refill fluid available in 1-oz., 6-oz. and 16-oz. sizes.

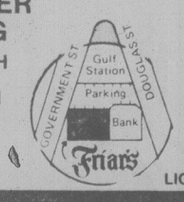

V.R.P.
Valuable Record Protector

VRP's are deluxe inner sleeves that protect records, with super-smooth, non-scratching surfaces and a built-in anti-static effect. VRP material will not ooze plastic additives onto records as do some "polysleeves." Available in packs of ten.

Canadian dazzles London

LONDON (CP) — Zealous London critics are convinced they've discovered a new Beatrice Lillie, and Vancouver-born singer-comedienne Leueen Willoughby says she's thrilled by the comparison to a woman who was once the darling of Broadway and London stage.

Currently playing in Nashville New York, a four-handed revue based on the verse and lyrics of word-monger Ogden Nash, Willoughby says the comparison suits her fine.

"To tell you the truth, there's no one I'd rather be compared to. I couldn't be happier about it. I think it's terrific and it suits me just fine."

Under the glowing headlines "Dazzling Canadian is Nash cocktail bonus," Daily Telegraph critic John Barber says:

"As a bonus, the revue contains a shining, dazzling, delicious new personality, a lissome Canadian called Leueen Willoughby."

"As well as eyes like headlamps, a black fringe and a sly sense of mischief that awakes thoughts of Beatrice Lillie, this superlative young woman sings like a bird in a style that reminds one, in the words of Nash, that to love is an action verb."

Willoughby, who came to London 10 years ago to study theatre at the Bristol Old Vic school, "looks like a young, hatless Beatrice Lillie" says Guardian critic Michael Billington.

The Kurt Weill and Vernon Duke music is from the Nash-Weill 1943 musical One Touch of Venus and the 1950's Duke Revues.

"The Weill songs all have a whiff of gunshot from the battle of the sexes," says Coveney, "but Miss Willoughby is adept at turning the lyric back on itself and scorning emancipated points."

The General Dynamics F-16 is the world's best air-to-air and air-to-ground fighter. Its superb performance ensures that it will meet all the Canadian requirements assigned to the New Fighter Aircraft.

If Canada chooses the CF-16 as its New Fighter Aircraft, the real winner will be the Canadian taxpayer.

The F-16 has the lowest initial acquisition cost and lowest operating cost of any high-performance aircraft in the world. In addition to its tremendous military advantages, the CF-16 programme proposed for Canada provides the following:

- A $2.8 billion dollar boost to the Canadian economy!

  The CF-16 Industrial Benefits Programme will mean more than 20,000 new jobs for Canadians and new work in each and every province. With a value greater than the cost of the entire aircraft acquisition programme, this $2.8 billion benefits package is all NEW WORK! It does not include presently planned work nor follow-on work on programmes now being carried out in Canada by General Dynamics, United Technologies, their associates and subcontractors.

- A half-billion dollar savings in initial acquisition costs!

  Canada requires a minimum of 130 aircraft. Purchase of 130 CF-16s would cost one-half billion dollars less than purchase of 130 CF-18s. For the same funds required to purchase 130 CF-18s, Canada can buy 167 CF-16s.

- Another half-billion dollar savings in operating costs!

  The CF-16 over its lifetime will save Canada at least another half-billion dollars in uninflated operating costs . . . and 130 CF-16s will use 11 million gallons less fuel each year than 130 CF-18s.

- More savings in logistics and support costs!

  One of the New Fighter Aircraft's principal missions is to support NATO defence of Western Europe. In January 1980 the F-16 will be operational with five of Canada's NATO allies. If the CF-16 joins this NATO team, it will have available to it equipment and support pools already in place, resulting in further additional dollar savings.

This time, it has nothing to do with Charlie's Angels, but Farrah Fawcett is right back in the middle of a union-management fight. Seems Bill Clifford, district manager of the Rochester Telephone Corp. in Fairport, N.Y., doesn't want her hanging around any more — and the union is taking him to task for his attitude. The squabble erupted when Clifford ordered employees to take down several Farrah pin-up posters. Clifford says among other things, they're "tasteless, socially offensive, sexist and unbusinesslike" and serve "no utilitarian purpose." The union local has filed a grievance — says the case is up for "possible arbitration."

JoJo Starbuck forced her mother to stop smoking, told her husband, Pittsburgh Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, to chew tobacco only away from home, and now wants all of Pennsylvania to go cold turkey. abby

Dear Abby:

Last summer I overheard my clergyman talking to a young woman who is a member of his congregation. He told her it was all over between them, and that if his wife hadn't been in the hospital it never would have happened. He said they should go on as though nothing had happened.

I was so shocked I could hardly believe my ears. This minister has done much for the community and is loved and respected by all who know him. He also has a lovely wife and family.

I told my husband about it. He said we all make mistakes and that I should keep quiet because if this ever got out it might hurt the church.

Now I can't even look at that worthless man without thinking what a hypocrite he is to preach 'honor and fidelity.' I would like to be able to forgive and forget, but I just can't.

I have lost all faith in him. What should I do?

Small Town

Dear Small:

Your husband has the right attitude. Clergymen are not saints. They are men with all the frailties men are heir to. One swallow does not a summer make. Nor does one transgression make a man 'worthless.' Judge not.

Dear Abby:

My husband is very good-looking and is on the lying side of 50. He doesn't look like the swinging type, but I wouldn't put a thing past him. He gives a rather attractive, youngish divorcee, who works in his office building, a ride home nearly every evening. He doesn't accept any pay, but he does sometimes stop at her apartment for a drink (he says) now and then.

He's never more than half an hour late in getting home. Do you think he could be unfaithful to me in half an hour?

Cal's Wife

Dear Wife:

I don't know. He's your husband, lady. Could he?

Dear Abby:

A guy who works with us has given up cigarettes. Not smoking them — just buying them.

He has bummed at least one cigarette a day from each of the six guys who work with him, and since he never carries any of his own, there is no chance of getting one back.

We can't say we don't have any when he asks, since he knows we do, but please tell us how to cure him of this chintzy trick?

Gary and Frank

Dear G and F:

Next time he asks for a cigarette, offer to sell him a pack, or when you run out yourself, "borrow" the money from him to go and buy another package that he surely be willing to share with you two.

Cold feet over frozen fish?

By LON WOOD

Jan Howarth reminds you of cold fish — that's her job.

"We are trying to emphasize the deliciousness of frozen fish — and that it can be bought at any time, all year round," she told The Times Wednesday.

Frozen fish may be bought all year, but November is Fish and Seafood Month in Canada and home economist Howarth was hired by Fisheries and Oceans in Ottawa to promote the message. She does it with more relish — rather tartar sauce — than most contract consultants.

"Everyone says, 'Oh, frozen fish! I'll wait for fresh!' and then they will take fresh fish home and put it in a — excuse me — tin-pot freezer that goes down to zero (Fahrenheit) and that's it. No way can the consumer duplicate that 65-degree below-zero flash-freezing point used when it is commercially frozen.

"And unless you catch the fish yourself and put it in the freezer right away, how do you know how fresh your "fresh" fish is? It can be two or three days from catch to counter."

Howarth, who works out of Vancouver, stepped into the freezer room at Oakland Fisheries Ltd., 630 Montreal on the James Bay waterfront. She picked up a frozen steelhead to show the rock-hard quality of commercially glazed-and-frozen fish.

"I'm very uptight about retailers selling fish that has been previously frozen," she said. "You don't know how long it has been thawed — so buy it frozen rather than thawed; frozen rather than "fresh" if you plan on freezing it at home anyway.

"I would be aghast at anyone buying a fresh fish in the supermarket and taking it home and freezing it."

When fish has thawed to long, said Howarth, the juices drain away.

In preparing frozen fish, she said, no one should be able to tell whether the fish is fresh or frozen.

"The consumption of fish in restaurants has gone up and people believe they are getting fresh fish — which it can't be in most cases. If I cooked it for you, you'd never know whether its fresh or frozen — it is how it's cooked," she said.

To get the best quality out of frozen fish one should partially thaw it to the ice crystal stage. "Don't thaw completely or you'll lose all the juices."

Use the same high heat (450 F.) for cooking all fish, she said, using 10 to 12 minutes per inch of thickness through the thickest part. "Most people overcook it."

Oakland manager Dick Sonley agreed with Howarth that commercial freezing can't be bettered at home.

"The product when it leaves our plant is solid — in conformation to federal fisheries regulations which are fairly stiff," said Sonley. "Once it's out of the plant, however, lots of things might happen — that's one of the problems the consumer faces."

Before leaving Victoria, Howarth passed on several fish dishes, some of which will be printed for Times readers throughout Fish & Seafood Month. Here's a sample:

CRAB OMELET

1 pkg. (170g) frozen crab, thawed or
1 can (170g) crab
125 mL sliced fresh mushrooms
25 mL chopped green onion
25 mL butter
25 mL sour cream
125 mL grated Swiss cheese
*4 French omelets
Sour cream (optional)
Chopped chives (optional)

Drain crab and flake. Remove any bits of shell or cartilage. Saute mushrooms and green onion in butter. Stir in sour cream, cheese and crab. Heat gently until cheese begins to melt. Keep warm while preparing omelets. Spoon 75 mL filling along centre of each omelet and fold sides into middle. If desired, top with sour cream and chives.

Make 4 servings.

* For each omelet use 2 eggs, 15 mL water, salt and pepper to taste.

Picking the best takes know-how

When buying frozen fish, look for a glazed fish coated with ice, having shiny, solidly frozen flesh with no signs of drying or freezer burn, and wrapped tightly in a package with a moisture-proof material showing no frost or ice crystals when package is opened.

When storing, keep fish at zero Fahrenheit (-18 Celsius) or lower, with fat species such as salmon and lake trout for a maximum of two months. Lean types such as cod, haddock and perch can keep to a maximum of six months.

When buying fresh fish, also look for a glistening appearance, firm elastic flesh that springs back when pressed, glossy taut skin with good coloring and firmly attached scales and clear, bright, gleaming, convex eyes and bright red gills.

If possible, keep the catch alive in water or eviscerate immediately upon catching and wash. Keep in a cooler or in moss, away from sunlight, until you reach home.

To freeze, use strictly "fresh" and "cleaned" fish. Dip leaner species for 20 seconds in salt solution in order to firm the flesh (a cup of salt per gallon of water). Wrap fillets, steaks and whole fish tightly in laminated paper, and seal in freezer bag.

Place small fish in an ice cube tray, cover with cold water; freeze solidly. Remove block. Wrap.

Freeze whole large fish solidly on a cookie sheet; dip frozen fish quickly in cold water and return to freezer. Repeat several times. Wrap glazed fish.

Fisheries Canada notes that as Canadian consumption of fish increases in the face of higher meat costs, greater amounts of the annual Canadian catch are directed to the domestic market. In 1978 Canadians ate approximately 7.9 kg of fish per capita, compared to 7.6 kg in 1977.

The fish burger has come into its own and the ever-popular fish and chips is experiencing a revival, as are specialty seafood restaurants.

The largest rise, however, is in the home, says the ministry.

— Serve a poached or baked fish fillet on whole wheat toast with a tomato slice and smother with a creamy cheese sauce.

— Marinate tiny cooked shrimp with lemon and onion slices in seasoned salad oil for an appetizer.

— Feature crab, canned salmon or tuna in your next quiche.

— Include drained, canned clams in an array of garnishes served with Gazpacho.

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I have diverticulitis. I have learned to live with the attacks that come and go. I am 59, and my major concern is whether or not I will develop serious complications from this. Is there a special diet that could prevent these attacks?

Mr. L.B.

Dear Mr. B.:

Diverticulitis is an inflammation of tiny pouches, or sacs, which are found on the outer surface of the small and large intestine (colon). Many people with diverticula may go on for their entire lives without having any infection or inflammation of these pouches. It is only when food particles are trapped in the sacs that infection, or diverticulitis, sets in.

How to ward off attacks of diverticulitis has been the object of studies for many years. In general, it is agreed that one of the most effective means of preventing attacks, and of making them of shorter duration and frequency, is to avoid constipation. And one of the best means of doing this is to increase the amount of fluid intake. This prevents drying of the undigested material in the intestinal tract.

In recent years, an increase in roughage, or fibre, in the diet is said to be beneficial.

Some doctors are enthusiastic about pureeing fruits and vegetables in order to supply added minerals and vitamins. Others believe that adding agar-agar, a seaweed derivative, to increase the bulk of fecal material in the colon, is beneficial.

An interesting new concept is being given great consideration. Vitamin B is manufactured in the intestinal tract by the bacteria in it. When large amounts of antibiotics are taken for any reason, the bacteria that manufacture vitamin B may be destroyed, and a deficiency of this valuable vitamin may occur. It is for this reason that the diet should be supplemented with vitamin B — especially folic acid, which is part of the vitamin B complex.

Dear Doctor:

About eight months ago, I had a D and C because of an excess of menstrual bleeding. Can this have left any harmful effects? My husband and I are now contemplating having a baby.

Mrs. M.S.A.

Dear Mrs. A.:

Dilatation and curetage (D and C) is one of the most frequent surgical procedures performed in North America — a very safe procedure.

The fact that you had this done should not make you anxious about conception nor about the birth of a child. Your obstetrician will give you the added assurance you need when you are ready to consult him.

More in U.S. remain childless

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than half of all wives in the United States between the ages of 18 and 34 have jobs, and 11 per cent of them expect to remain childless, a new Census Bureau study shows.

The government study also said more married couples are waiting longer — about two years — to have their first child.

Those were the highlights of the new census report entitled "Fertility of American Women."

"Not only are many women working today but many plan to begin or return to work shortly after the birth of a child," the report said. "Thus, they face the competing roles of both mother and worker."

Handbook for disabled

Stairs pose classic obstacle for the handicapped

By NADINE BROZAN
New York Times

How do you put on stockings when you can't bend over to pull them up? What is the easiest way to clean a bathtub if you are unable to bend down? Can you water-ski if you are blind? If you are on crutches, can you keep an exuberant toddler from running free on the street?

Answers to those and hundreds of other questions that might arise in the life of individuals with a physical handicap can be found in The Source Book for the Disabled, a volume published recently by Paddington Press of New York and London. It is the result of three years of work by six journalists, some handicapped, some not.

The book's potential audience is a large one. Statistics are imprecise, but the number of individuals with some kind of physical handicap is estimated at one in 10. As the authors put it: "Physically disabled people — men, women and children who were born with a physical impairment or who have a physical limitation as the result of illness, injury, accident or age — represent the largest, although often hidden, minority in the world."

The book, $9.95 in soft cover and $15.95 in hard cover, describes practical ways for such individuals to cope with the details of everyday life.

For example, besides showing diagrams for architectural reconstructions, it offers simple but ingenious ideas such as tucking in a bed sheet with the help of a wooden spade or making cutlery easy to grasp by encasing it in a motorcycle handle.

"It is very helpful for people who are disabled or have someone disabled in their family," Dr. Frank Bowe, director of the American Coalition of Citizens With Disabilities, said. "It is helpful because it talks about the nitty-gritty issues rather than the generalized psychosocial 'problems' of disabled people. It gets to the heart of issues by telling you such things as how to buy and repair a wheelchair." Bowe is deaf and was being given the questions during a telephone interview by a sign language interpreter.

In addition to practical suggestions illustrated by 600 line drawings, the book is a declaration of the rights of all handicapped individuals to participate fully in every aspect of life. The authors of the book, which was edited by Glorya Hale, emphasize that they prefer the term "people with disabilities" to "disabled," which, they say, has a more stereotypical connotation.

As an example of its outlook on the disabled, the section on sexuality states, "Every person, regardless of sex, age or disability, is a sexual being. Unfortunately, not only the general public but also many professional people who work with the handicapped and certainly the families of the disabled frequently ignore or deny the sexual needs of people with disabilities. Every individual, disabled or able-bodied, has the right to be informed about all aspects of sex, the right to sexual expression and the right to enter into an intimate relationship."

The same attitude prevails in a discussion of economic rights, education, employment and the decision whether or not to have children.

The book also takes up such controversial questions as whether students are better served by being educated in the same classrooms as able-bodied youngsters or in special programs.

For those with additional questions, the book provides a comprehensive list of organizations, publications and other resources.

Book gives eating advice

food for thought

By JEAN MAYER

We recently received a copy of Foods, the Department of Agriculture's colorful, highly-readable publication on ways to go about eating better. It is something of a first for the department.

Produced by the Human Nutrition Centre and the Consumer and Food Economics Institute of USDA, Food focuses on approaches to a healthy, nutritious, low-calorie diet in general and, in particular, on two planning areas that pose problems for many people -- what to do about breakfast and snacks.

The booklet also advocates the basic four food groups when choosing foods to be included in your diet, but in line with current medical concern about overconsumption of certain components of the diet, adds a fifth group — foods we should avoid or go easy on. They call it the 'fats, sweets and alcohol group.'

Here are some of the Department of Agriculture's suggestions for achieving real reductions.

ON FAT:

Curb your purchases of fatty meats such as regular ground beef, corned beef, spareribs, sausage and heavily-marbled meats such as prime ribs. Choose the leaner cuts of red meat when you do eat meat. Such cuts include flank, round and rump (especially 'choice' or 'good' rather than 'prime' grade), lamb legs and loin, lean ham and lean pork loin, picnic and Boston butt hams. Moreover, use more low-fat meats such as veal, or poultry and fish in place of red meat. Regardless of the type of meat, trim off the fat before you eat it.

Substitute low or nonfat milk for whole milk. Also select low-fat dairy products — low-fat cottage cheese and feta cheese, for instance — in place of those higher in fat. Make a determined effort to cut out saturated cooking fats and butter; substitute unsaturated oils and margarine.

Cut consumption of hidden sources of fats in foods by eating fewer fried foods (choose broiled or boiled or baked instead), heavy sauces and gravies, baked goods and chocolate. Go easy on nuts and peanut butter, since they also are quite high in fat, and thus in calories.

ON SUGAR:

Hide the sugar bowl. It's the best way to cut down on the sugar you add to food.

Go easy on candy, pies, cakes, cookies, pastries, and avoid desserts and between-meal snacks of sweets or sticky foods. Substitute fresh fruits, raw vegetables, low-fat milk or nuts when the urge to snack comes over you.

Pass by regular soft drinks, punches, fruit drinks and ades, and substitute fruit juices or plain water instead.

Buy unsweetened cereals and fruit canned in its own juice, or at least in light syrup instead of heavy syrup.

Remember that ingredients are listed in descending order by weight, so watch for these words: sugar, sucrose, glucose, dextrose, fructose, corn syrups, corn sweeteners, natural sweeteners, invert sugar. All mean a sugar-like substance, and the higher they are listed on the label the more there is present.

If you'd like a copy of Food, write for Home and Garden Bulletin 228, available for $3.25 from the Consumer Information Center, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

WATER: Take a second look

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

For many decades, North Americans have taken the healthfulness of their water supply for granted. And undoubtedly many — perhaps most — people still do. After all, you rarely if ever hear these days of outbreaks of typhoid, cholera, dysentery and other waterborne diseases once common before the advent of chlorinated community water supplies and restrictions on the placement of wells and cesspools.

But sales of bottled water have zoomed in recent years, as millions of Americ- have become concerned about their health and the safety of that liquid that comes out of their taps. Others have purchased various filtering devices to purify their home water supplies. Studies suggest that their concern may be justified, but that the alternatives they've chosen are often no better than the tap water they spurn. Stronger, community-based action may be needed to clean up our water.

Not only do infectious diseases transmitted through tap water still occur — afflicting at least 10,000 Americans a year (and probably many more since most cases of illnesses like intestinal "flu" go unrecognized as attributable to water) — but a far more serious threat may exist. Studies have shown that the nation's 50,000 water supplies are liberally laced with potentially harmful substances — including asbestos, pesticides, heavy metals like lead and cadmium, arsenic, nitrates, sodium, viruses and organic chemicals that are known to cause cancer.

Ironically, the very process by which we cleanse our water of infectious organisms — chlorination — is responsible for creating cancer-causing substances, or carcinogens, from otherwise innocent chemicals in water. The chlorine can combine with other pollutants in water to form such carcinogens as chloroform, carbon tetrachloride and bis-chloroethane and other chemicals collectively called trihalomethanes.

In the mid-1970s, the Environmental Protection Agency, the federal unit responsible for the purity of our water, made two surveys of municipal water supplies around the country and found chlorinated organic chemicals in significant amounts virtually everywhere.

To date, more than 300 different organic chemicals have been identified in American drinking water; most have not yet been tested for their ability to cause cancer. Even though these chemicals may be present in only minuscule amounts, the average person consumes one and a half or more quarts of water every day of life. Chronic exposure to small amounts of carcinogens can add up to a significant hazard.

Clean source taken for granted a long time

Indeed, in at least 15 studies carried out so far, a real hazard has been suggested. In New Orleans, where the Mississippi drains agricultural chemicals into the water supply and where the hazard of chlorinated carcinogens was first noted, cancers of the kidney, bladder and urinary tract are more common than in most other cities.

A study of 88 counties in Ohio showed that death rates for cancer of the stomach and bladder were more common in those served by surface water supplies (from rivers and lakes) than in those with ground water (from wells). The EPA surveys revealed that the concentration of organic chemicals was considerably higher in surface water supplies. Another nationwide study showed a relationship between the levels of trihalomethanes in the drinking water and deaths from cancers of the bladder, brain, kidney and lymph glands.

While none of the studies so far proves that a waterborne cancer hazard exists, they all suggest there's cause for concern. The hazard can be greatly reduced by filtering the water through activated carbon granules prior to chlorination. However, only a few water systems currently do this, and then only to remove foul odors and tastes. Another approach involves the use of ozone instead of chlorine to purify the water.

Other substances in water that are worrisome include the following:

Nitrates. These chemicals, present in both surface and well water from agricultural runoff and seepage from septic tanks, are a direct hazard to infants, causing methemoglobinemia or blue-baby syndrome. In persons of all ages, they may contribute to the formation of potent carcinogens called nitrosamines in the digestive tract. Nitrates can be removed from the water supply by treatment through an ion exchanger.

Sodium. The Environmental Defense Fund, which has petitioned the EPA for stronger water safety rules, notes that water supplies may contain up to 500 parts of sodium per million parts of water.

In some sections of the country, such as the Northeast and Middle West, the problem is seasonal, the result of runoff from highways that have been salted in winter. In others, the water is naturally high in sodium.

This may have no effect on most people, but for the 10 per cent who are predisposed to high blood pressure and the 27 1/2 million North Americans who already have this disease, the high sodium content of drinking water could be a hazard. While sodium is hard to remove from water, the fund suggested that the sodium content be monitored regularly and the public be warned when high levels occur in the water supply.

Heavy metals. In communities where the water is "soft" — that is, the water is corrosive because it contains relatively few dissolved minerals and salts — toxic metals from water pipes may leach into the tap water. For reasons not yet known, studies have shown that in soft water areas the death rates from cardiovascular diseases are considerably higher than they are in areas where the water is hard.

This may result from higher levels of cadmium (leached from galvanized pipes) and sodium in soft water. Some communities, like Boston, where many homes have lead pipes, now add lime and carbonates to the water supply to reduce its corrosive action.

Asbestos. Asbestos fibres enter the water supply primarily through erosion of asbestos-containing rocks and asbestos cement water pipes and runoff from sanded roads. Several years ago, persons drinking water from Lake Superior were shown to be consuming large amounts of asbestos fibers dumped in the lake by a mining company.

Although the hazards of asbestos in water are not known, asbestos workers exposed to the persistent fibres of this mineral have high rates of cancers of the lung and gastrointestinal tract and an otherwise rare fatal cancer called mesothelioma.

Asbestos levels in water can be reduced by hardening the water to make it less corrosive, and the fibers can be removed by conventional filtration techniques.

What can you, the consumer, do about making sure your water is fit to drink? Aside from being costly, bottled water is not necessarily better than that which comes out of your tap. Some is just processed tap water to which minerals, with or without carbonation, have been added.

Dr. Robert Harris, water specialist at the Environmental Defense Fund, suggests that before you make a major investment in bottled water, check with the manufacturer as to its source, the type of processing and results of tests of its contents and purity. Most nationally sold brands are probably free of organic carcinogens. However, an EPA survey showed that many bottling plants had sanitary deficiencies and some bottled water was contaminated with intestinal bacteria.

In general, Harris suggests you choose natural spring water derived from a protected watershed, that is, one in a nonindustrial area. The addition of minerals or carbonation by the processor does not compromise the safety of the water. However, carbonation can be a problem for persons with hiatus hernia or other digestive disorders.

As for home water purifiers, the EPA has completed tests on seven of the more than three dozen now available. The results ranged from "totally useless" for a $12 model that fits on your faucet to "as effective as filtration at a water treatment plant" for a $300 unit that's attached to your main water source.

The main problem, however, is that even the expensive units permitted the growth of bacteria on the intake side of the unit; the bacteria can then contaminate the water that comes out of your tap. Home filter units can magnify the bacterial content of tap water by tens of thousands of times.

The Environmental Defense Fund suggests an inexpensive and safer homemade alternative:

Put a coffee filter paper in a large funnel. Wash enough granular activated carbon (it can be purchased in one-pound bags from Walnut Acres, Penns Creek, Pa. 17862) to fill one-quarter of the funnel. (To wash carbon, put it in a jar, fill it with water, cover and shake. Let the carbon settle and pour off the water at the top. Repeat until the water you pour off is clear.) Now set the funnel in a large clean jar, add the carbon and slowly pour your tap water through the funnel. Change the carbon every three weeks, or after 20 gallons of water have been filtered through it. Store the filtered water in the refrigerator.

For further purification, you might boil your tap water gently for 15 to 20 minutes, which would evaporate off many of the carcinogens. After boiling, bottle it and store closed in the refrigerator. Certainly, any water that appears turbid (cloudy, indicating possible contamination by sewage) should be boiled for at least 10 minutes if you have no choice but to use it.

An alternative is to add liquid chlorine laundry bleach or tincture of iodide. Use two drops bleach per quart of clear water or four drops per quart of cloudy water. Mix thoroughly and let stand for 30 minutes. You should detect a slight chlorine odor. If not, repeat the treatment and let stand an additional 15 minutes. For iodide, use five drops per quart of clear water, 10 per quart of cloudy water, mix and let stand for 30 minutes.

If your water is soft, first thing in the morning or after hours of nonuse, let the cold water run for a few minutes before you draw it for drinking or cooking. Don't use hot water from the tap for these purposes, since it's likely to have a higher metal content.

Sun seekers need not vacation on the run

"Montezuma's Revenge", "Maui Tummy." Call it what you will, but it adds up to a ruined holiday in the tropics. One thing is certain. When you've saved vacation time for a year, travelled miles at great expense, you certainly don't want to be curled up in a darkened hotel room, when the sun is shining. Nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, severe cramps, even bleeding, are common symptons once you've caught the bug.

If you are one of the thousands of Canadian "Snow-Birds" heading to the warmth this winter, you can and should safeguard your health while you're enjoying the sunshine, by following a few simple precautions:

— Be cautious of milk and milk products. They are easily spoiled. Avoid custards and soft cheeses. If you are in a housekeeping unit, use powdered milk (that's been carefully stored) and dilute it with boiled or treated water, if you're not sure of the water supply.

— Only use treated or safe water. Contaminated water is one of the most frequent sources of intestinal disorders in the tropics. Unless you have absolute assurance that the water is safe, use boiled or bottled water only for drinking, brushing teeth, cooking. Check those ice cubes as well. (Alcohol won't kill any germs). Or add a water purifier tablet like Halazone, but remember it takes 30 minutes to work, or add two to three drops of chlorine bleach for each quarter of water.

— Water can be purified if it's boiled for 10 minutes for each quart of water, then cooled and stored in a sterile container.

— If you're in a housekeeping unit, store foods properly in well-ventilated areas. Plastic containers with tight fitting lids are great — they'll keep sugar, milk powder, cereals and grains, vermin-proof. The old adage "when in doubt, throw it out" should be kept in mind — food spoils quickly in the heat.

— Buy small amounts of food, and try not to have leftovers.

— Don't buy swollen or rusty cans — and once that can is open, remember it will spoil just as quickly as cooked food.

— Keep up your fluid intake — but not through alcohol. The fruit punches, and exotic concoctions may taste great at the time, but can cause intestinal problems. Plain soda water with lime is still best.

— Choose raw fruits you can peel. Avoid those with broken or bruised skins.

— Avoid foods that are not piping hot when served — meats should be thoroughly cooked.

— Water loss must be replaced with fluid and additional salt. Salt tablets shouldn't be necessary except under extreme heat conditions. You can get the needed salt by salting your foods a little more heavily than usual.

— If you are travelling to a very hot country, check with your doctor. He may suggest a medication to carry with you "just in case".

— If you do get a mild case, don't panic. A new climate, different time zone or excitement can throw your body's natural rhythm out of kilter. A couple of days of discomfort is frustrating on a holiday, but often stopping solid foods and just sipping gingerale laced with bitters, clear broths, or juices, to replace potassium and fluid you're losing, helps. Steer clear of milk and milk products totally. Once the vomiting and diarrhea stops, head back to soft foods but add milk last.

Three out of every one hundred babies born will be mentally retarded. Many of the causes of mental retardation can be prevented if the expectant mother follows some basic rules.

These rules begin with a good diet. The best diet for an expectant mother is one which includes lean meat, poultry, fruit, vegetables, eggs and dairy products. Starchy meals are filling, but should be avoided as they do not contain sufficient nutritional value.

Also to be avoided are tobacco, alcohol, and nearly all kinds of drugs. Tobacco and alcohol can impair the growth, the heart and the disease defences of a child. As for drugs, mother should restrict herself to those which are prescribed by her doctor.

A Better Start In Life is a 12-page booklet that is published by the Candian Association for the Mentally Retarded. the booklet takes the reader from the period before conception, right through to early infancy with tips on how to ensure good health for her child.

Pricing battle erupts

By DAVE ROONEY

"Yes," says the Consumer Association of Canada. "No," says Loblaws.

The CAC is urging shoppers to boycott a new Loblaws store here because about 85 per cent of its products are not individually priced.

Prices are marked on shelves but the store is Ontario's first to rely solely on a computer for checkout counter price information.

Although common in the Western provinces, supermarkets which use computerized checkout counters to price unmarked products were unknown in Ontario until the middle of October when Loblaws opened the Ottawa store and another in London.

"The major concern of the (CAC's) Ottawa consumer committee is that individuals lose price awareness if prices are not available on each item," said Rosemary Loggie, local chairman of the CAC.

The CAC does not object to the technology, she said.

Loblaws spokesman Kathy Sackrider said in a telephone interview from Toronto that she doubts smart shoppers will lose their price savvy.

"Grease pencils are available to anyone who wants to mark prices on their goods," Mrs. Sackrider said.

"Instead of listing a product as groceries at 31 cents the new terminals list it as, say, Campbell's soup at 31 cents," she said.

Shoppers who save their slips can compare them week after week and if they are over-charged Loblaws will give them the item free, she said.

Prices are changed after hours and are programmed into the store computer. The new prices are cross-checked against a price list stored in the Toronto-based chain's central computer.

When scanned by a clerk's light pencil, the black-and-white bar code stamped on every can or package identifies the product to the in-store computer which matches it with a price.

"There really isn't much room for error," Mrs. Sackrider said.

But Mary Pappert of the Kitchener, Ont., CAC office disagees.

"We know there are errors. We have encountered them. What we need is proof."

She said the CAC wants Frank Drea, provincial minister for consumer and commercial relations, to introduce mandatory price-marking legislation in Ontario.

While price-marking laws are common in some of the United States, only Quebec has such laws on the books here.

Mrs. Pappert said consumers who have encountered price errors at computer checkouts should write the CAC with the details.

Milk linked to problems

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Excessive milk drinking causes much of the juvenile delinquency, overactivity and other behavior problems among adolescents, says a Tacoma researcher.

"Milk is certainly a good protein source and is excellent food for adolescents, but 24 ounces a day is enough," Alexander G. Schauss says in a recent report to the Society of Clinical Ecology.

Schauss says the link between excess milk consumption and behavior problems was found in a study of 54 long-time juvenile offenders from the Seattle area.

Schauss, a counselling psychologist and director of the Institute for Biosocial Research at City College, Tacoma, said numerous factors concerning the 54 were compared with those of non-offenders.

The milk-delinquency relationship was a surprise.

"Frankly, we had been expecting to find that sugar, additives and other things would be implicated, if anything," he said.

In comparing the diets of the two groups, those with repeated offences were found to have eaten very little fruit, vegetables and nuts, but drank between 60 and 120 ounces of milk a day.

The effects of heavy milk consumption were proved effectively here and elsewhere when misbehavior decreased markedly as milk intake was restricted.

Schauss, who equates "compulsive intake of milk" to compulsive behavior, said some of the adolescents studied were malnourished because they were filling up on milk and leaving no room or desire for other parts of a balanced diet.

HOW TO LOSE WEIGHT ON THE AMAZING
no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Vitamin A	Vitamin E	Vitamin C	Vitamin D
Thiamin	Riboflavin	Niacin B6, B12	Folid Acid Biotin
Choline	Calcium	Phosphorous	Iron
Iodine	Magnesium	Copper	Zinc

Doukhobors critical of citizens' group

A special volunteer citizens' committee to help ease tensions among Doukhobors and other citizens in the Kootenays is ready to work, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Wednesday.

But leaders of both Orthodox and radical Sons of Freedom sects are critical of the committee.

John Verigin, leader of the Orthodox sect, said: "We've heard lots of promises in the past".

He criticized the committee's makeup as inadequate.

Peter Slastukin, Sons of Freedom spokesman, called the committee makeup weak.

"He (Gardom) never said nothing much about us to solve our problem, he appointed a few citizens to deal with it."

The Kootenay Committee on Intergroup Relations will operate independently of government.

"It is to examine the situation in detail and bring together the various groups and individuals involved to attempt to find workable solutions," Gardom said.

He said the committee was established in July and has held meetings to set its terms of reference, but only now is ready to commence its activities.

The minister said the main concern in and around the Doukhobor community is communications among the citizens.

Verigin was recently cleared of conspiracy to commit arson. The main prosecution witnesses, who were from the rival Freedomite sect, alleged Verigin ordered them to set fires under fear of a seven-generation curse if they refused.

The six members of the committee are Rev. Ted Bristow, Rod Cameron, a mental health centre director, retired teacher Doug Feir, Hugh Herbison, a former member of the Doukhobor Consultative Committee of the 1950s, Selkirk College professor Mark Mealing and anthropologist Derryl White.

Ban on Active Pass fishing criticized as bad precedent

Banning sports fishermen from Active Pass could establish a precedent which would affect anglers throughout the entire Gulf of Georgia, the president of the Galiano Chamber of Commerce warned Wednesday.

Les Woodbridge was responding to a demand by the B.C. Ferry Corp. that sports fishing be banned in the six-kilometre pass and outside both entrances.

Ferries running between Tsawwassen south of Vancouver and Swartz Bay near Victoria travel through the pass.

The corporation suggestion was made in a letter to the coast guard released Tuesday at the first of three public hearings on navigational safety in Active Pss between Galiano and Mayne Islands.

Woodbridge said if the pass is closed to fishermen, it could pave the way for closures in other areas travelled by ferries.

Gulf Islands businessmen say the ban would cripple the tourist industry, which relies on sports fishermen.

Woodbridge, who witnessed the Aug. 9 grounding of the B.C. Ferry Queen of Alberni in Active Pass, said there have been no accidents caused by sports fishermen in the pass and only a minority of pleasure boaters hamper larger vessels.

Sports fishermen have been accused of hampering ferry traffic in the pass and the coast guard scheduled public hearings on the matter following the Aug. 9 grounding.

During a hearing on Mayne Island Wednesday, speakers accused ferry skippers of speeding through Active Pass with little concern for other traffic.

Horst Klein of Otter Bay Marina echoed the feelings of many present when he said that the problem is one of lack of enforcement of existing and adequate regulations.

Fishery officers afraid

ALERT BAY (CP) — Resentment among fishermen over a fishery closure at the height of last summer's pink salmon run is running so high that some federal fisheries officers say they are afraid to work in this community.

The result is the fisheries department is going to move its district office from this community to Port McNeill, 12 kilometres away, because it cannot attract staff here.

Barry Rosenberger, a local fisheries officer, says he has been the target of "quite a few physical threats" since protests arose over the closure, despite the fact that officials later relented and allowed fishing for two days.

The tense atmosphere has apparently discouraged applicants for a vacancy here, although there were several bids for a similar job at Port McNeill.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE MOTORING PUBLIC AND CANDIDATES IN THE UPCOMING MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

The British Columbia Automobile Association is in favour of, and strongly supports, the introduction of an efficient public transit system for the Greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria Regional Districts. It is opposed however, to the planned financing of this system through added fuel taxes.

The BCAA is concerned with the protection of the interests of B.C. motorists and with maintaining the rights and privileges of those who use motor vehicles in this province. It is for this reason therefore that this open letter is published on behalf of the Association's 324,000 members, more than 180,000 of whom live in the lower mainland and in greater Victoria and are directly affected by the proposals.

The Association contends that the private motorist should only be responsible for a fair share of the costs of construction and maintenance of roads and streets.

Currently B.C. motorists are already paying taxes in excess of 50 cents of every dollar when fuel is purchased. Under the proposed arrangements for financing public transit in the Greater Vancouver and Victoria regions, another 3.3 cents would be added, with provision to increase such "add-on" taxes to 9.1 cents a gallon.

This added fuel tax has been cited as a small amount to pay for an efficient transit system, but too few motorists are aware of the facts. This added fuel tax will not provide any improvement in the present transit service let alone a futuristic Light Rapid Transit System estimated to cost more than $500 million.

It should be recognized that the 3.3 cent added fuel tax will not finance the construction or maintenance of a light rapid transit system but will only be used to cover existing and projected operating deficits!

Moreover, the financial demands of meeting the capital costs and maintenance costs of the projected new light rapid transit systems are so great that it must be met by funding from a more equitable formula.

The Association is not aware of other mass transit systems or LRT systems which draw funds directly from fuel taxes.

Both the Toronto and Edmonton transportation systems are directly government funded and the Bay Area Rapid Transit system in San Francisco supplements rider fares with an additional ½ of 1% sales tax levied in the area served by the BART system.

These funding systems, the Association contends, are not punitive to one segment of the community and recognize the individual's desire to use private vehicles.

It is contended by some that an increase in fuel prices is a good thing because it will reduce traffic and increase transit patronage. In the history of transit throughout the world this has not proven to be true and until transit offers the comfort, convenience and mobility of the private automobile it will generally attract only a limited percentage of commuting motorists.

The assumption that transit is more fuel efficient is also untrue because transit must operate around the clock even when it has minimal patronage. The energy saved by a switch to public transit would be trivial in comparison to a switch from large to small cars, a process which is currently occurring in Canada.

In summary, the Association considers that where a facility, such as mass transit benefits the whole community, then that total community should pay for it.

Sincerely,
British Columbia Automobile Association

Tanker crash blast leaves 50 missing

ISTANBUL (AP) — A 150,000-ton Romanian oil tanker and a small Greek coastal freighter collided in the Bosporus early today, setting off thunderous explosions and fire and leaving 50 Romanian crew members missing, officials in this Turkish port said.

They said rescuers found one dead crew member and picked up three from the Romanian tanker Independenta, which carried a crew of 54.

There was no immediate information on the crew of the 5,298-ton Greek coaster Evria.

prosecuted if he confessed."

Mrs. Thatcher's written statement continued: "The Queen's private secretary was informed in April, 1964, both of Blunt's confession and of the immunity from prosecution on the basis of which it had been made."

The revelations followed publication of a book which said a titled Englishman who knew the Royal Family and a British atomic scientist were Soviet spies during and after the Second World War.

But the book, Climate of Treason, by historian Andrew Boyle, did not name the two men.

Mrs. Thatcher said: "Blunt admitted to the security authorities that, like his friends Burgess, Maclean and Philby, he had become an agent of Russian intelligence and had talent-spotted for them at Cambridge during the 1930s, that he had regularly passed information to the Russians while he was a member of the security service, and that although after 1945 he was no longer in a position to supply the Russians with classified information, in 1951 he used his old contacts with the Russian intelligence service to assist in the arrangements for the defection of Burgess and Maclean."

Blunt left his small London apartment Wednesday and took a taxi to Heathrow airport, a porter at his home said.

"He left about 7 a.m. carrying a lot of cases," the porter said. "He didn't tell me where he was going and I did not ask him".

Blunt was made a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1932, at the age of only 25.

During the war, he served in France and after the war was awarded the French Legion of Honor.

S.A. 12 guilty of treason

PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Judge Johan Hefer found 12 black militants guilty of high treason today and sentenced one of them to death.

The other 11 defendants received sentences ranging from 14 years to 19 years imprisonment.

The prosecutor had demanded the death penalty for all the defendants.

It was the first time in South African history that anyone has been sentenced to hang for treason.

The death penalty was decreed against 24-year-old James Mange. He also was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment for contempt of court in the two-month trial in Pietermaritzburg, a small college town 50 miles west of Durban.

The other 11 defendants had one-year added to their sentences for contempt of court.

The guilty verdict and sentencing came at the end of a stormy session that saw the judge clear the courtroom three times and charge the defendants with contempt for the 15th time.

The 12 sat stony-faced as the judge ended a 120,000 word trial summation and found them guilty on the treason charges under South Africa's anti-terrorism laws. They were acquitted of alternate charges of conspiring to commit murder.

Immediately after the judge pronounced the verdict, prosecutor Robert Seggie rose to his feet and asked that the death penalty be imposed on all 12 men who then broke out into a "freedom" song and raised clenched fists in a black power salute.

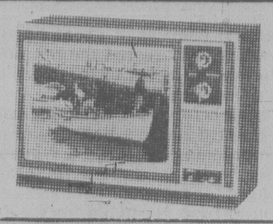

Hefer ordered the courtroom cleared for the third time Thursday. Earlier the defendants chanted anti-apartheid slogans, waved protest signs and jeered at the judge from the glass cage built around the benches where they have been sitting during the long trial.

The men were charged with 12 counts of high treason and 43 alternate counts of sabotage and anti-government activities. All the charges arose from a series of shootouts with police in 1978.

The men have admitted to being members of the outlawed African National Congress, which sent a death threat to the judge shortly after the trial opened.

The state has claimed that all the men underwent military training in Soviet Union, East Germany and Angola and returned to overthrow the government by force.

Vatican U.K. link restored

LONDON (AP) — The Pope's personal envoy in London is being given diplomatic rights as a first step toward establishing full diplomatic relations between Britain and the Vatican, The Times reported.

The newspaper, in a front-page story Tuesday, said the Foreign Office is about to grant diplomatic immunity to Swiss Archbishop Bruno Heim, Apostolic Delegate to Britain, and that Britain now regards him as a recognized diplomatic agent.

There was no immediate comment from the Foreign Office or the Vatican.

King Henry VIII broke with the Vatican in the 16th century over the Pope's refusal to approve his divorce from Catherine of Aragon, and established the Church of England.

Parachute wasn't Cooper's

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — The FBI says it has ruled out any connection between a partly buried parachute found in a wooded area of southwest Washington and the eight-year-old disappearance of plane hijacker D. B. Cooper.

The parachute was found by a logger Darrell G. Ray and turned over to the sheriff's office Monday.

But Bill Williams, an FBI spokesman in Portland, Ore., said "We have determined after examining the chute that it is not related to the case at all."

A man using the name of Cooper boarded a Northwest Airlines jet headed from Portland to Seattle on Nov. 24, 1971. While airborne, he threatened to blow up the plane with a bomb he claimed to have in a briefcase unless he was given $200,000.

After the plane landed in Seattle, Cooper freed the passengers and was given the money and four parachutes. He ordered the plane to fly to Reno, but opened the rear boarding ramp of the Boeing 727 somewhere en route — believed to be over southwest Washington — and bailed out.

Chrysler recall

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Wednesday that it is recalling 7,000 Dodge Miradas and Chrysler Cordobas as a precaution to fix two potential problems.

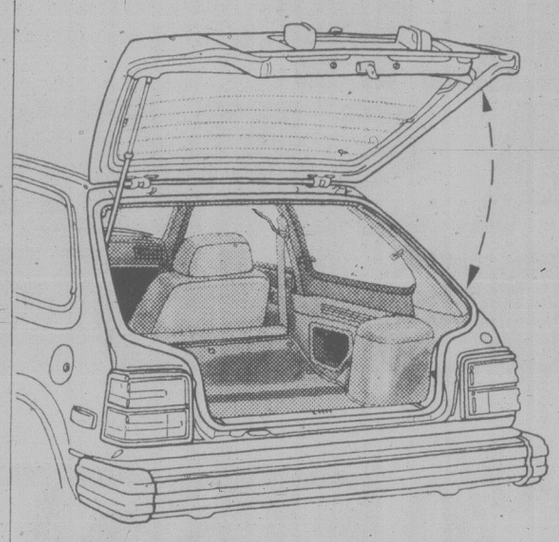

In Windsor, Ont., a spokesman for Chrysler Canada Ltd. said 1,200 cars will be recalled in Canada. Of these, 700 will be recalled for a check of the throttle and the remainder for a problem with fender panels.

The offending fender panels could let exhaust leak into the passenger compartment, but Chrysler said that had not happened in actual use as far as it knew.

THE NEW HONDA CIVIC.
WHAT'S BIGGER.
WHAT'S NOT-SO-BIGGER.

BIGGER. Look inside a new Honda Civic and you'll see that this year there is even more hip room, shoulder room and leg room in both the front and back seats. How do you prove it? By putting your hips, your legs, and your shoulders inside the car and seeing for yourself.

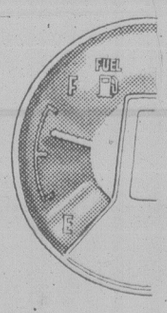

NOT-SO-BIGGER. One of the great things about the original Civic was that it was so easy to park. One of the great things about the new Civic is that it is so easy to park. Yes, we made it bigger. But no, we didn't make it so bigger that it wouldn't make sense in the real world of driving.

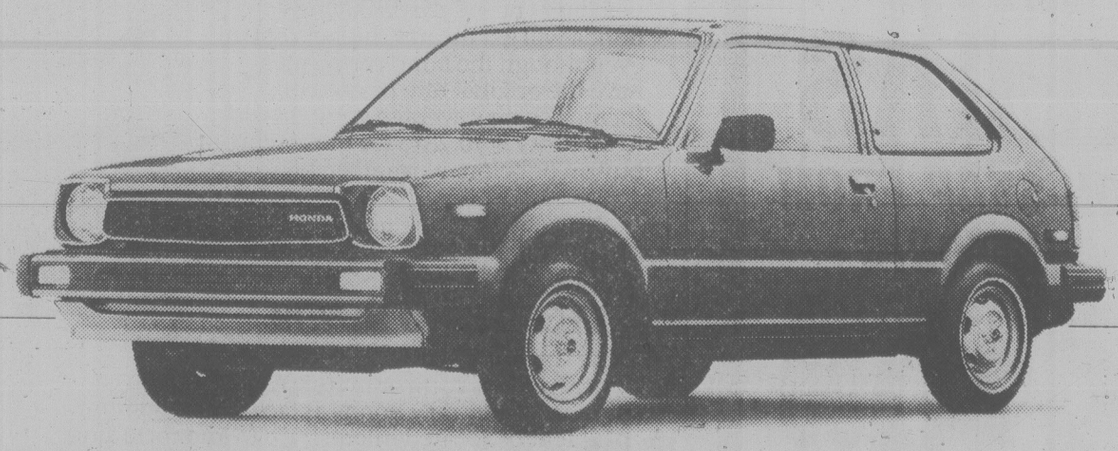

BIGGER. The hatchback that is standard on all Civics is bigger this year. It now opens right down to the rear bumper Why did we make it bigger? Because we made the cargo area 14% bigger so you can get even bigger things in.

BIGGER. Usually when a car gets bigger, and the engine gets bigger, the mileage gets smaller. Not so with a new Civic.

It's true that it got bigger, but it's also true that the mileage got bigger. And better. It gets a Transport Canada rating of 6.7 litres per 100 kms.* Which is 6.5% better than last year's Civic.

NOT-SO-BIGGER. Don't ask us how we did it, but we made the car bigger and the price smaller. This year's standard Honda Civic Hatchback actually costs less than the Civic Hatchback did a year ago.

THE LEGEND GETS BIGGER.

*These figures are estimates based on Transport Canada approved laboratory test methods. The actual mileage you get will vary according to your driving habits, your car's condition, optional equipment and driving conditions. These estimates do, however, provide a useful comparison guide for new car models. Model illustrated is the Civic Hatchback Deluxe.

Political machines off to rusty starts

By ANDREW MOLLISON
Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — The proverbially well-oiled political campaign machines are clanking along lustily, but rustily, in this year's early-starting presidential campaigns.

When Republican Ronald Reagan's motorcade left the New York Hilton after his announcement speech Tuesday night, it swiftly sped into a narrow dead-end street on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

Most of the cars turned around promptly, but the press bus had to back up a block. That manoeuvre was in no way eased by the insistence of New York cabbies on squeezing past.

One more false turn later, the bus arrived at LaGuardia Airport only a half-hour late, and Reagan's jet made up 10 minutes of that en route to Washington's Dulles airport.

The next morning was worse. His chartered plane broke down in Washington, delaying him an hour. So he missed the lunchtime crowd at his Boston stop.

Boston was also unlucky for Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy, when he announced his candidacy there the previous week. One of the four Boston buses carrying reporters to Logan Airport lost track of the motorcade.

Finally, after a half-hour search the bus was found, brought to planeside and unloaded. The planes took off a half-hour late, and reporters were then informed that their plane would circle for 15 minutes with its flaps down in order to use up 4,500 pounds of jet fuel.

After the planes were light enough to land, they touched down at Manchester, N.H., where reporters arrived at a downtown restaurant in time to hear Kennedy speak on energy. They also learned that a fire marshal concerned about possible overcrowding had ordered the restaurant owner to lock them out of the room that contained their box lunches.

The week before that, Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker's first day of official campaigning featured a "genuine Tennessee barbecue" in New Hampshire. He arranged for 400 pounds of barbecue to be flown up from Nashville for the free, family-style event.

That was supposed to be enough for 2,000 people. About 2,300 thrifty New Hampshirites showed up.

Some got Kentucky-fried chicken hurriedly ordered from a nearby fast-food restaurant. Others had to settle for a handshake from the senator.

Republican Rep. Phil Crane's original staff quit last spring, and he and his fundraiser agreed to part ways. The fundraiser then went to work for Republican John Connally's campaign.

Republican Ben Fernandez, who says a businessman's acumen is needed in Washington, swiftly went through three campaign treasurers — one of whom steadfastly refused to turn over his month-long set of books — before finding a fourth treasurer who would stick with him. Then his press secretary, still loyal but tired of missed paychecks, quit.

All that makes Democrat Jerry Brown's problems look minor. He was being transported behind his press bus in a car that was stopped by a cop because its lights were flickering.

When the press corps poured out of the bus to record the ticketing of Brown's car, the policeman diplomatically put his summons-book away.

By then the weak car battery that had caused the flickering was dead. To get back on the campaign trail, Brown's car had to be given a jump start.

Millionaire death blamed on KGB

NEW YORK (UPI)'— American multimillionaire David Karr, who died July 7 of an apparent heart attack, may actually have been murdered by Russian agents because of a business deal for the 1980 Olympics, his family claims in Fortune magazine.

Family and friends claim in the magazine's latest issue that the Russians suspected Karr was ripping them off in a huge deal for the international sales of Olympic souvenir coins made for the 1980 Moscow Games.

The retail value of the coins, minted in Russia in silver, gold and platinum, has been variously estimated at $250 million to $300 million.

The Fortune article, written by Roy Rowan, said Israeli officials never have believed Karr died of natural causes.

Israeli security agents claim to have evidence that Karr was involved in secret Russian arms sales to Libya, the Palestinian Liberation Army and to Idi Amin in Uganda.

The article said the implication of the Israeli claim was that Karr also cheated on the arms deals. The alleged sales to the PLO and others were made despite Karr's avowed friendship toward Israel and Soviet Jews.

Afghan rebels repulsed

ISLAMABAD (Reuter) — Afghanistan's Soviet-backed government has scored its first major success against tribal insurgents who have been fighting to topple it for more than a year.

A recent government offensive in Paktiar Province, the heart of the rebellion, smashed insurgent strongholds, relieved besieged garrisons of Afghan troops and routed the estimated 55,000 armed guerrillas based in the region.

The attack, late last month, apparently caught the guerrillas by surprise and up to 1,000 people were reported killed and 800 wounded. The insurgent commanders and what remained of their forces fled to neighboring Pakistan with their families and left the province in the hands of the government. There were nearly 40,000 refugees.

Early this month, Afghan troops supported by tanks swept through northern Paktiar and mopped up remaining pockets of resistance, according to reports reaching here from Western and Asian diplomats in Kabul.

The success came at an opportune time for Afghanistan's president, Hafizullah Amin, whose early differences with the Soviet Union might have threatened his rule.

Tarakki had returned four days earlier from Moscow where he had a highly publicized meeting with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Parents clean up garbage

HONOLULU (UPI) — More than 100 of the state's 228 public schools planned to reopen today for the first time since government blue-collar workers went on strike three weeks ago.

Another 700 workers whose jobs were deemed essential to public safety and health were suspended Wednesday for 10 days for refusing a court back-to-work order. About 1,500 workers were suspended Tuesday.

The suspensions will become effective when the strike ends.

Public schools have been shut down since Oct. 26 because of unsanitary conditions resulting from the 25-day-old strike by 7,700 government blue collar workers, including janitors, groundskeepers and refuse collectors.

Representatives of the United Public Workers and the state met Wednesday but no progress was reported. The negotiations were to resume Friday.

The major issue in the strike is wages.

Early Wednesday, the state conducted a selective cleanup of the main lobby of Honolulu International Airport using privately-hired cleaning people, most of them teenagers.

December 28, 1978

The drive to renovate the Royal has raised $600,000 and the plan is to have $1.8 million in the kitty to complete the rather huge task at hand

A Face Worth Saving

OLD THEATRES don't die, they just fade away and Victoria's Royal Theatre is more faded than most. At 68 the dowager is looking her age. The aisle carpets are dirty and ragged, the seats badly worn and the walls wear a smoky paint stained with years.

Most people only see the Royal under dim, pre-show lighting, which is just the way any faded starlet would want it for under the light of day her flaws show up only too clearly.

But those who know her for what she is say that beneath the chipped plaster and ruined facade there lies a face worth saving.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, chairman of city council's cultural development committee, is one of the believers.

McKenzie has spearheaded a drive that so far has raised $600,000 to renovate the failing theatre — and he hopes to have rounded up $1.8 million by the time he's done.

The money is coming from the three municipal governments that own the building (Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich) and from the provincial pocket. Future funding may come from the federal government as well, and McKenzie hopes he can convince Esquimalt to contribute.

McKenzie said that in recent years more than a few artists have refused to return to the Royal after experiencing the dressing rooms.

BUT THAT'S all been changed now. The new rooms bright, well lit and freshly carpeted.

The building is also getting new fire exits and other fire safety devices to the tune of about $100,000.

Soon the public areas in the theatre will be renovated — new carpets for the aisles, refurbished seating, fresh paint where needed, column lights to highlight the walls and hand painting to illuminate the ornate plaster work.

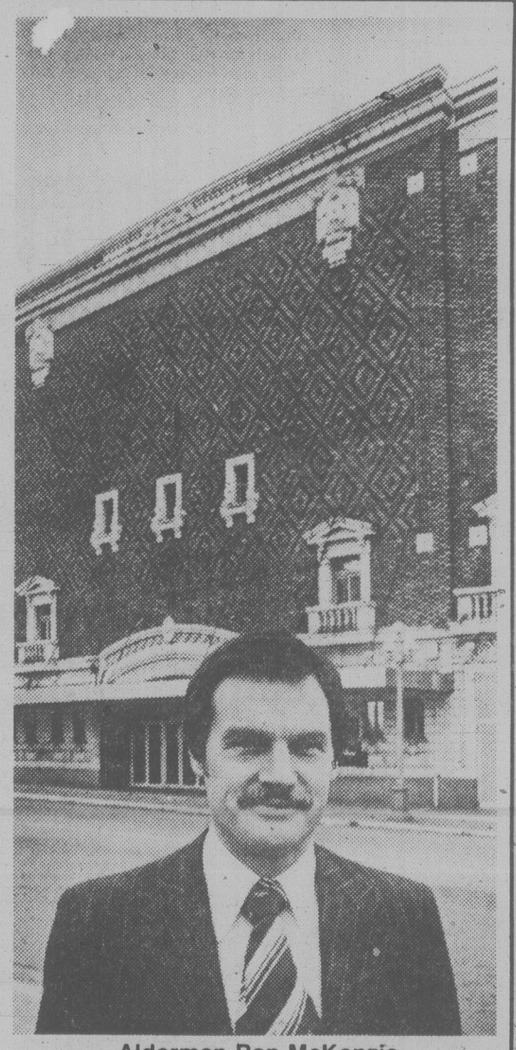

After that has eaten up the $600,000 on hand McKenzie hopes the balance of the funds will have been raised, allowing the Royal Theatre committee to launch some major renovations up front.

The third phase would include stripping the canopy from the face of the building and restoring the exterior to its original form. Inside the foyer would be greatly enlarged and perhaps a pair of cocktail lounges added.

There are also some structural changes proposed that could see the theatre's seating increased from 1455 to 1650.

Alderman Ron McKenzie is a believer

"I've heard it called an Edwardian jewel and I think that's just what it is. It's a beautiful building that's full of potential. I'd put this on a par with the Orpheum in Vancouver as far as the esthetics are concerned."

He adds that the Royal is an important part of Victoria's past and worth saving almost on that point alone.

She was young when the Empress was young, and along with that great old hotel and the Crystal Gardens was one of the things that made Victoria what she was in the early 1900's.

Rhodesia plan accepted

LONDON (AP) — Opposing parties at the Zimbabwe Rhodesia talks today accepted Britain's plan for a new interim government, paving the way for a peace settlement.

Britain announced the agreement after intense telephone communication throughout the night and further meetings this morning.

The 10-week-old talks arranged by Britain now can move to the final stage of working out a ceasefire in the seven-year-old war between government and nationalist guerrillas in Zimbabwe Rhodesia that has left 20,000 dead.

Despite the difficult negotiations ahead, the prospect of an end to years of international ostracism and bloody conflict lay in sight for the breakaway British colony of seven million blacks and 230,000 whites.

The final plan calls for a British governor to rule Zimbabwe Rhodesia and supervise new elections before it is granted legal independence.

Nicholas Fenn, spokesman for British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, told a news conference: "Lord Carrington is delighted. He pays tribute to the statesmanship of both delegations."

Agreement came after Britain amended its original plan for direct rule during new elections and a ceasefire by stating that the Patriotic Front guerrillas will, like Salisbury's government troops, come under the direct authority of the proposed British governor.

Scant look at $6M budget

The Capital Regional District Wednesday approved a $6,193,886 health budget — up 6.15 per cent — with little discussion and representatives of several of the major contributing areas absent.

Ald. Murray Glazier, board chairman, and city aldermen Bill Tindall and Bob Wright, were at a Chamber of Commerce meeting where Glazier and Tindall were speaking as mayoralty candidates. Wright arrived in time for the vote but missed the discussion.

Mayor Mel Couvelier and Ald. Howard Sturrock of Saanich, both running for re-election, were absent along with Ald. Fred Severson, who is retiring. Ald. Sandy Noel attended as Sturrock's alternate.

Glazier and Couvelier missed the meeting but turned up in time for the short in-camera meeting that followed.

Others absent were North Saanich mayoralty candidate George Westwood, Sidney mayor Norma Sealey and Central Saanich alderman Dave Hill.

Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell noted this is a bad time of year for elected officials to give sufficient attention to anything as important as the health budget and wanted it tabled until the next meeting.

But he was told the provincial government has set a deadline for approval of the budget.

Total requisition from CRD municipalities will be $1,241,010 with the remainder coming from the federal and provincial governments and a surplus from this year.

Forestry to slap interest on outstanding bills

A summer report that the B.C. government lost interest on $26 million because of late billing of timber royalties and stumpage fees has prompted the forest ministry to introduce interest charges on outstanding bills.

Forest Minister Tom Waterland said Tuesday the charges will take effect early in 1980.

"The interest rate, set by the minister of finance, will be the prime rate plus 1½ per cent, and will apply to all balances outstanding over 30 days," he told a Canadian Institute of Forestry meeting.

The change was the result of Auditor-General Erma Morrison's report released in July, Waterland said in an interview Wednesday.

Her report, however, blamed the delays on the government's computerized billing system.

Waterland denied that industry was being asked to carry the cost of government mismanagement.

"If the bills aren't presented to the person who has to pay them, then you can't expect them to be paid."

He said the inventory and billing systems are being improved.

CRD meetings in for facelift

The Capital Regional District will to hire another expert — this time to figure how it should run its meetings.

The finance and personnel committee agreed Wednesday to commission lawyer Ian Izard, deputy clerk of the legislture, to help redraft its procedural bylaw which sets the guidelines for CRD meetings and those of its commissions and committees.

In a letter to executive director Dennis Young, Izard said his fee would be $75 per hour and estimated the job would take about 20 hours.

The CRD is considering hiring its own solicitor and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young wondered if the project might not be handled by him.

Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell said the existing procedural bylaw is ludicrous.

He says Izard is an expert in the specialized field of procedures.

In other business, the committee agreed to recommend retroactive increases to CRD employees for use of their cars on CRD business.

The mileage rate for use of cars will be increased from 20 to 24 cents for the first 8,000 miles and from 10 to 12 cents for mileage in excess of 8,000.

For employees with more limited mileage, the allowances will be increased from $80 to $96 per month for all mileage travelled up to 400 miles in any one month.

Sewer problem study sought

Central Saanich council will ask the Capital Region District to undertake immediate engineering studies to determine the cause of a sewer problem in the Brentwood Bay area.

Council's sewer and public works committees recommended the action Tuesday night.

Committee members were reacting to numerous complaints in recent months of periodic overflows of sewage from pumping stations in the area.

Council had thought the problem was associated with power outages but it appears overflows occur at other periods, too.

Ald. George MacFarlane said if the trouble can be corrected by installing emergency generators at the pumping stations then the cost will be around $120,000.

But if the trouble is something more complex, possibly relating to the size of pipes or holding tanks, then the costs will likely be considerably higher.

In other matters, residents of the Simpson Road area won a commitment from the municipality public works committee to widen the verge on the Mount Newton Crossroad to make it safer for children walking to and from Saanichton elementary school.

About 50 residents showed up at the meeting to express their concern.

Council members were also advised by the municipal solicitor that there was nothing improper in their decision to place lands at the head of Tod Inlet into a development permit area.

Critics get review

Opposition by Langford and Metchosin residents has forced the Capital Regional District to take a second look at enforcing urban controls in the Western Community.

The regional board Wednesday referred back to committee a bylaw the planning staff had been asked to draft.

It was similar to one adopted in View Royal and would have banned more than one unlicensed vehicle per property, as well as detached parts of vehicles and more than two recreation vehicles.

Langford director Ed Lubick opposed the bylaw because he said residents feel it would severely restriet them.

Metchosin director Mac Tipton also said he was unhappy and had been told by residents it was more applicable to Colwood and Langford than to Metchosin.

You are behind the wheel of an extraordinary machine. The engine is a fresh step in design. Electronically fuel-injected. Smooth. Quick. With the best power efficiency in its class.

According to Transport Canada Ratings, a 1980 200 SX beats every car mentioned above and dethrones Honda Prelude to become the new sports coupe champion in gas efficiency.

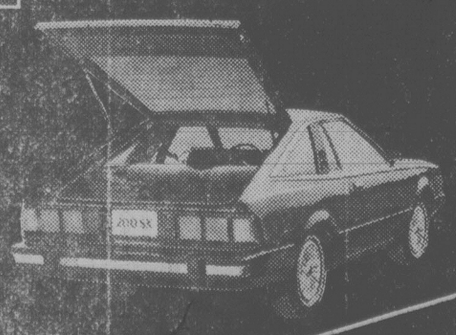

The moment of truth is how it handles. On a wet street, on a sharp corner, beautiful. With less body roll. Less side-slip. Taking a bump it grabs for the road.

Run through the five-speed overdrive. Feel how responsive, how precise it is. Power-assisted disc brakes stop all four wheels. That's common only on cars costing many thousands more.

Technical superiority is one thing. Detailed craftsmanship, the first six year anti-rust plan, and knowing that Datsuns lead in fewest repairs* that's reassuring. But the emotions stirred by a new 200 SX must be felt personally.

Take one out for a test drive.

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

Let's imagine you're in six notrump and win West's diamond lead with the queen. Your sure winners are three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs — a total of ten tricks — and you need two more.

Obviously, your best chance of getting two more tricks lies in clubs, where you have a two-way finesse for the queen. If you knew the location of the queen, it would be easy to trap the damsel by finessing in the right direction and thus make the slam.

Locating the queen is a serious challenge and deserves your closest attention, because misguessing the two-way finesse could cost you 1,740 points.

It is too early, at trick one, to decide which opponent has the queen of clubs, since you know next to nothing about the East-West hands, so you start an investigative campaign to force the enemy to reveal their distribution.

In line with this, you play the ace of hearts at trick two and then a low heart. West takes your ten with the queen and returns a diamond to dummy's ace.

You cash the king of hearts and, when the suit proves to be divided 3-3, you also cash dummy's eight, pitching a club. Then you play the A-K-Q of spades and king of diamonds, discarding a club from dummy as East discards a spade.

All your worries are now over, because the count of the hand is complete. West started with six diamonds (East showed out on the third round of diamonds), three spades and three hearts. He therefore started with at most one club.

So you confidently lead the jack of clubs to the king and finesse the ten of clubs on the way back. It's like taking candy from a baby!

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #142. Many thanks to CFAX for holding and broadcasting a Town Hall Meeting of the Candidates for Mayor at City Hall, Tuesday evening. Your City's Watchdog attended the motion picture "Running" at the Haida Theatre which ends today. It is a story about having the courage to be what you are. It points out that some people quit because they are afraid of losing, but it also points out to Your City's Watchdog if at first you do not succeed try again. Over the past two years Your City's Watchdog has submitted many suggestions to City Council and to various people which have benefited the area in many ways. One was the Saving of the Passenger Service of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway. The last project was to protect the people in Victoria of the mail rip-off, which took advantage of elderly and innocent unemployed people anticipating of making sums of money from a questionable mail operation and was successful with the assistance of CHEK TV and the Better Busines Bureau in preventing possibly hundreds of people sending money to Texas. Please read tomorrow's column or continue to phone 383-6259 Your City's Watchdog C. Joe Richards candidate for Alderman to Victoria City Council 1980-1981 and he will continue to act as your Ombudsman.

Budget boost for lab work

OTTAWA (CP) — University research will get a 32-per-cent budget boost next year in the first stage of a five-year plan announced today to overcome what has been termed a critical shortage of research scientists.

Science Minister Heward Grafftey unveiled the program which will give the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council $159 million next year to improve and expand university research training.

But Grafftey said at a news conference the government has not yet decided what increases the council, which oversees financing for university research, will receive over the following four years.

"University research, particularly in the natural sciences and engineering, has been eroded in the 1970s due to a decline in the real value of federal support (less inflation), declining enrolments and a low turnover of university staff."

Fortier warned that unless more federal and provincial government support was forthcoming, bright young persons would have to be turned away from higher education.

Government critics have also reported that over the last 15 years, the number of post-graduate university students has declined by 43 per cent.

CP profits jump

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. of Montreal has reported a record nine-month profit of $368 million so far this year, or $5.11 per ordinary share, 52 per cent higher than the first nine months of 1978, when profits were $241.5 million, or $3.34 a share.

Profits for the third quarter of 1979 reached $141.8 million, or $1.97 per ordinary share, up 71 per cent from the same period of 1978.

Sharp gains were reported by Canadian Pacific's rail operations, which showed profits of $70 million for the first nine months of 1979, up from $51.5 million a year earlier. Third-quarter earnings reached $24.1 million, more than double last year's $10.2 million.

CP Investments showed nine-month profits of $236 million, up from $149.6 million last year. Profits in this year's third quarter reached $81.9 million.

CP Ships bounced back from a 1978 nine-month loss of $11.7 million to register an $18.4-million profit this year, mainly because of strong market rates for tankers.

CP Trucks, however, showed a loss of $1.6 million in the first nine months this year.

CP Air, which showed a strong 1978 nine-month profit of $23.4 million in part because of a strike at Air Canada, dropped slightly to $18.5 million.

CP Telecommunications doubled its profits to $4 million for the first nine months this year from $2.2 million

Just as well Germany lost, says Rommel's son

EL ALAMEIN, Egypt (AP) — Manfred Rommel, son of the legendary German field marshal, visited the desert site Wednesday where the crucial battle of El Alamein was fought 37 years ago and said it was just as well his father lost.

"It's a sad thing for the German people that today they must admit that it was better to lose in war than to win, especially in the face of several thousand soldiers killed," said the 50-year-old mayor of Stuttgart and son of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

"But we have to admit it. It would have been terrible if Hitler had won the war," Rommel told reporters as he scanned the barren sands where minefields still lie in wait and rusting relics of warfare can still be found.

Erwin Rommel, the "desert fox," was defeated in a battle that turned the tide of the Second World War in favor of the Allies.

A sandstone shrine on a hilltop overlooking the Mediterranean Sea honors the 4,200 Germans who died here in the field marshal's attempt to capture Egypt.

The younger Rommel, a tall, bespectacled lawyer who bears only a faint resemblance to the lean and intense field marshal, said "my father understood the desert. This would mean something to him, but to me it's just sand... I have no feel for topography."

Yet Manfred Rommel, a schoolboy of 15 at the time of the battle between his father and British Gen. Bernard Montgomery, edited his father's papers for a book and proved himself an astute student of the war.

The mayor was cautious not to identify with the Nazi past, refusing at one point to pose for a picture beside a display in which a wax mannequin represented the field marshal in Nazi uniform.

Rommel also visited the shrines for the Italian and British forces, laying wreaths of red roses on the tombs.

An Egyptian tourism official told Rommel that "despite the outcome of the battle, we consider Rommel the greater fighter and that's why we built a museum for Rommel in Mersa Matruh." The mayor just shrugged in reply and avoided the museum only a few kilometres away.

The battle of El Alamein was fought between Oct. 23 and Nov. 4, 1942, pitting Rommel's panzer divisions with about 500 tanks against an Allied force with twice as many tanks and many more soldiers.

While the British also suffered heavy casualties, Rommel's vaunted Afrika Corps left the field with less than a dozen tanks after a battle so ferocious that Rommel wrote in his diary:

"Rivers of blood were spilled over a miserable strip of land which in normal times even the poorest Arab would never have bothered his head about."

Manfred Rommel said he discussed the battle Tuesday with President Anwar Sadat, an admirer of the field marshal's daring tactics.

"He respected my father as a soldier," said Rommel.

"But mostly we talked of peace," said the mayor, who came to Cairo to set up a sister city program and was made an honorary citizen.

Religious sect soliciting here termed legal

Members of a Quebec-based religious sect called the Apostles of Infinite Love have been soliciting funds in the Victoria area, prompting a rash of calls to the Better Business Bureau.

The blue-garbed "sisters" in the break-away Roman Catholic group have been passing out leaflets on downtown streets and knocking on doors in residential areas.

BBB manager Denny Ryan said Wednesday the bureau has had about 20 calls from people questioning the legality of what the sect members are doing.

Ryan said there is nothing illegal in their soliciting for funds, that they are in effect begging and people can decide for themselves whether to contribute to their cause.

The controversial group, also known as the Order of the Mother of God, was founded in 1962 by "Father" Jean Gregoire de la Trinite in St. Jovite, Que.

The sect has been embroiled in controversy for some time in Eastern Canada. This summer Gregoire and some of his followers came to Victoria with the intention of establishing a house, which they have done in the Duncan area.

In August, Remi de Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria, issued a memo warning that any support for the sect is "destructive of true Christian unity."

De Roo said in an interview Wednesday the goal of the Apostles of Infinite Love is to reform the church.

Sect members reject the church's modern renewal efforts as well as the results of the Second Vatican Council.

Gregoire sets himself up as a kind of Pope in the sect. Its members reject all existing church authorities and claim to follow a "Common Rule" dictated by the Mother of God in apparitions at La Salette, France, in 1846.

De Roo said he is not aware that Gregoire was ever validly ordained.

The bishop said he doesn't think he will take any other action in the matter because it would only draw publicity to the sect.

"We'll leave it to people to judge for themselves about the merits of the group."

In the leaflet being distributed on downtown streets, the sect claims to include about 250 priests, religious brothers and sisters as well as some lay members.

The sect's federal charter states that its goal is "to establish an independent religious order of the traditional Catholic faith . . . free of all secular control and/or domination on the part of any other religious order or religious authority."

The order claims to have two houses in the U.S., three in France, and two in Puerto Rico.

Fire destroys $1,500 bike

A $1,500 motorbike was destroyed when it burst into flames at Johnson and Douglas shortly before 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Firemen identified the owner as Terence Macartney, 310 Quebec.

Twenty minutes earlier, firemen went to 637 Dominion to put out a car fire caused by faulty electrical wiring.

PRICELESS PHONOGRAPHS were on exhibit and piles of old records changed hands at a record swap and sales meet that drew wall-to-wall people to the View Royal Community Hall on the weekend. The event was organized by avid record collector Rob Turner who collects pre-1960 Canadian issue Rock and Rock-a-Billy. Some sellers realized between $250 and $700 for their old platters. Mount Sinai back in Egyptian hands

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel returned Mount Sinai to Egypt today, clearing the way for President Anwar Sadat to celebrate the second anniversary of his peace initiative at the venerated desert mountain.

At a military ceremony at an Israeli-built airfield 20 kilometres from the mountain, the Israeli flag was lowered and an Egyptian flag raised in a ceremony that now has been repeated four times as Israel carries out its phased withdrawal from the desert peninsula.

Under an agreement reached between Cairo and Jerusalem, tourists from Israel will be allowed to visit the area under Egyptian supervision.

Under the peace treaty, the Mount Sinai area was scheduled to revert to Egyptian control next January.

But Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed to Sadat's request to advance the handover so Egypt could hold ceremonies there marking the second anniversary of Sadat's arrival in Jerusalem on Nov. 19, 1977.

Meanwhile in Jerusalem, a cabinet committee presided over by Begin decided today Israel will build five clusters of settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River in the next year.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor told reporters that the five clusters will contain 19 "points" over all, and that "several families" will live in each "point."

The different sets of numbers appeared to be an effort to minimize the impact of the decision, which is certain to be criticized by Egypt and the United States.

Washington says Israeli settlements in the West Bank are illegal under international law and obstacles in the drive for a solution of the Palestinian issue.

9% hike accepted by Saanich teachers

Teachers in Saanich School District have accepted an average 9 per cent wage increase in a 1980 contract settlement proposed by negotiators.

The trustees of District 63 have yet to give formal approval to the agreement but are expected to endorse their negotiators' recommendation.

It is the first negotiated settlement in the district since AIB controls were lifted. Last year the 350 teachers and school district went to arbitration for the current contract.

Salaries will rise 7 per cent across the board and in order to help teachers in lower categories a $400 lump sum will be paid to all teachers. Bargaining representative Gerry Kristianson said this has the effect of giving teachers near the bottom of the scale proporationately more than those near the top.

For some categories the number of increment steps will be reduced from 13; the $3,500 district allowance for travel to conferences and workshops to improve professional skills is raised to $5,500; school administrators will get 5 per cent salary increase, and the teachers' association will pay both teacher and district contributions to sick pay for those whose benefits have been exhausted.

Kristianson, pleased with the settlement, said teachers had acted responsibly in accepting the proposal.

Meanwhile, the 431 full-time teachers in Sooke School District are close to settlement with their board, said bargainer Roald Feness. He said the parties negotiated until 1:30 a.m. today with the help of a conciliator and that proposals will be put to the board and teachers today.

Teachers and board in Greater Victoria School District are going to arbitration and in the Gulf Islands it is anticipated the Saanich settlement will be the basis of agreement.

Cyprus force stays for now

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will keep its peacekeeping forces in Cyprus at least until next June, but it is not happy with the situation, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said Wednesday.

The minister told the Commons the current mandate of the United Nations force, and its 515 Canadians, expires on Dec. 15 and will be extended another six months by the UN Security Council.

Miss MacDonald said she fears Canadians stationed on Cyprus have become a permanent part of the local economy rather than just a peacekeeping force.

Any continuing Canadian presence should be based on commitments by the Turks and Greeks to resolve their own problems, she said. She had made clear to the foreign ministers of both Turkey and Greece that Canada expects the dispute to be settled.

Rites held for writer, traveller

A funeral service was held today for a former Salt Spring Island woman who was one of Western Canada's best known authors and sailors.

Mrs. Beryl Smeeton, 76, died Tuesday in Cochrane, Alta. where she and her husband Brig. Miles Smeeton have run a game farm since April 1970.

Her husband wrote Once Was Enough, an account of their first rounding of Cape Horn in their 45-foot Bermuda ketch Tzu Hang.

The couple sailed 100,000 miles in round-the-world trips in 19 years before deciding to leave the sea.

Mrs. Smeeton was the author of Summer Shoes in Springtime, which described her trek on foot through China in the mid-1930s.

Mrs. Smeeton is survived by her husband, their daughter, Mrs. Alex (Cleo) Matheson of Victoria, two granddaughters, Catriona and Sonamara, and two brothers, Charles and Miles Boxer, both of England.

Dionne quints father dies

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Oliva Dionne, 76, father of the Dionne quintuplets, died in hospital early today.

DIONNE

The quints, born May 28, 1934, were the first known survivors of such a multiple birth and the instant darlings of a sensation-hungry world.

Dionne was a a 30-year-old cattle farmer and already a father of six when he came in from the barn that May morning 45 years ago and found that his wife, Elzire, had given birth to five daughters.

The arrival of Cecile, Yvonne, Annette, Marie and Emilie changed his life.

Only three of the girls are still living. Emilie died at the age of 19 from suffocation during an epileptic seizure and Marie died in 1970, apparently of a blood clot.

No changes in baby bonus

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister David Crombie reassured opposition MPs Wednesday that the federal government will make no changes to the family allowance program this year or in 1980.

Liberal and New Democratic Party MPs quoted reports that the cabinet had decided to cut family allowance payments to upper-income families.

Hutchinson memorial

A memorial service will be held in the Memorial Pavilion Chapel, 2355 Richmond, at 1 p.m. Friday for Wilfred H. Hutchinson, former chief provincial geographer and a well-known mathematician, who died Tuesday in Vancouver. He was 89.

A veteran of the First World War, he joined the geographic branch of the lands department in 1920.

Hutchinson also gave many math courses at night schools. He became chief geographer in 1950 and B.C.'s representative on the Canadian Board on Geographical Naming.

He also prepared a text book on survey mathematics used for many years by Camosun College. He retired in 1955.

Fence-mending idea saves cash

jack beastall

The average wooden fence is built with six-foot cedar posts set 18 inches into the soil.

When the bases of the posts rot, a support post about three feet long is set by the old post and fastened to it with spikes.

The support post eventually rots and the whole fence is torn down and rebuilt.

Knowing that fence posts will always rot away below soil level and that the parts above soil level will outlast four or five sets of posts when well protected with paint, why do we continue this standard method of building, especially at the price of lumber today?

At one period, it was assumed that posts set in concrete would last indefinitely, but in our heavy winter rain seasons the posts eventually rotted at the top of the concrete and it was a massive undertaking for a property-owner to remove the concrete, fill the hole and build a new fence. If the blocks were not removed the fence had to be redesigned to fit posts in a different position.

Years ago, I tried out a goofy idea, as my neighbor called it, when building a new fence, and a later owner of the property found replacement so economical he wondered why all fences were not built this way.

Ordinary four-by-four cedar posts were purchased and 18 inches cut off each post. These pieces were, in those days, put into a tub of creosote to soak. Today, I paint them with the semi-liquid roofing cement.

In a junk yard, I found strips of soft cast iron with screw holes every two inches. These were cut to 12-inch lengths and attached lengthwise of three sides of each block, with six inches protruding on one end for attaching to the post.

The blocks were set into the post holes, the cut surfaces two inches above soil level, the shortened post set on top and secured with heavy screws. Today I use wooden cleats instead of metal with a minimum of nails so the posts do not crack. It is worth remembering that one nail will hold securely where three nails make a joint that is easily pulled apart.

A two-by-four was set 10 inches above soil level and carried a 10-inch facing board for the bottom of the fence. Wire was used for the fence although slats, boards alternating each side, or horizontal bars will do just as well.

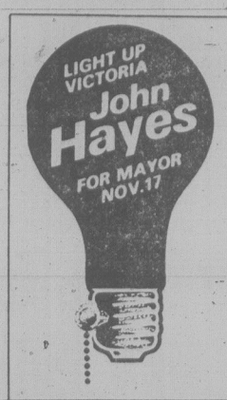

When the buried portions of the posts eventually rotted, the screws were removed from the upper post, the fence raised an inch or so, braced with odd lumber, and the rotted blocks removed.

New underground blocks were made, set in place and the fence lowered and secured again with screws.

One six-foot fence post gave four 18-inch blocks; only three posts were needed for replacement of a twelve-post fence.

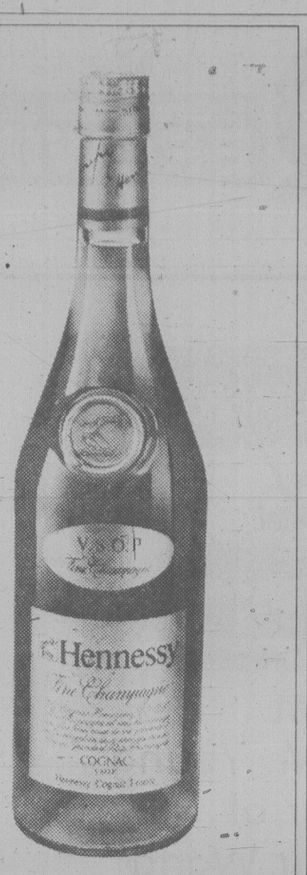

A few years ago the owner reported another replacement of the blocks and said the fence was still in good conditon after almost 40 years.

If you have a fence on its last legs it seems to me this goofy idea is worth considering. It may take a little more time at the beginning but many hard-earned dollars would be saved over a period of time.

Saving On Fuel Costs

Temperature setback can be accomplished manually by thermostat adjustments by the homeowner, but the Honeywell Fuel Saver conveniently and automatically provides consistent setback and setup. Honeywell Fuel Saver models also have an exclusive slow pick-up cam which progressively cycles the furnace in the pick-up period to avoid energy-wasting abrupt overheating. Honeywell's computer study indicating fuel savings with setback in typical climate conditions has become the standard accepted in the heating industry.

Semi-automatic CT100B Honeywell Fuel Saver

The semi-automatic Fuel Saver allows a family to "dial down" the thermostat at their convenience for greatest possible fuel savings by temperature setback. Simply dial the number of hours you'll be away or asleep — allowing time for the heating system to make a controlled recovery to its normal comfort level — and from there on the CT100B Honeywell fuel Saver will operate automatically. Quick and easy to install, no special tools required.

Before the judge

A defence lawyer Wednesday waived the remainder of a preliminary hearing for a 29-year-old man charged with indecently assaulting a 10-year-old girl.

Gerard Noel Brunette, 350 Douglas, was charged in connection with a Sept. 23 incident in Victoria.

The hearing started Wednesday before Judge William Ostler and Michael Hutchison said his client consented to a committal to higher-court trial without the taking of any further evidence shortly after 4 p.m.

After finding a 20-year-old Gold River logger guilty of dangerous driving, Judge Fred Green told the man he was sorry to find him in this predicament.

Evidence during the trial was that Victoria city police spotted Last driving his green Javelin at high speed south on Douglas near Johnson at about 2 a.m. July 8.

The police vehicle, which was heading the opposite direction, made a U-turn and began pursuit after an auxiliary constable in the vehicle requested all lights on Douglas to be turned red by the police dispatcher.

Police, who estimated Last's speed at 100-115 km/h in a 50 zone, caught up to Last at Douglas and Fort.

Last, who only had a learner's licence at the time, turned south again at Broad and stopped at mid-block, forcing the police car to swerve to avoid a collision.

Last admitted speeding but estimated his speed at 75-80 km/h. He said he only realized the police vehicle, which had emergency equipment operating from the point it made the U-turn, was behind him on Fort Street.

Defence lawyer George Walton entered the change of plea on behalf of Lorne Hugh Bowden, 101 Glentana, in connection with a June 29 incident in Saanich.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court police were called to 550 Dumaresq at 1:10 a.m. concerning a noisy party.

Bowden was boisterous when officers arrived and was told the calm down but refused, Laughton stated.

Police then decided to arrest him but Bowden resisted to the point where three officers were required to restrain him.

Walton said his client had been drinking and couldn't remember whose party it was nor many of the events which took place.

Laughton said 17-year-old Gordon Joynson, who lived at 535 West Bay Terrace, was approached by police at his residence concerning a 1968 Oldsmobile which officers discovered smashed into a rock wall at 7:25 a.m. Nov. 3.

Joynson told officers it was parked in front but, when advised it wasn't, stated it had been stolen. After more questioning, Joynson admitted that his friend drove his mother's vehicle into the wall, causing about $500 damage.

Duty legal aid lawyer James Main said the first thing that came to Joynson's mind was to report the car stolen.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Earl Wilbert Large, 43, of 4573 Montford Crescent, $500, and Scott Spencer Avery, 22, of 2890 Sea View, $200.

No jail term for throwing 2½-year-old

An 18-year-old Victorian who has lived on his own from the age of 11 and in a common-law relationship since he was 14 was given probation in county court Wednesday for assaulting his son.

Stanley Alan Smith was accused of assault causing bodily harm on March 17 to Aaron Rogers, then 2½, but pleaded guilty to the lesser offence of common assault.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Smith picked up his son and threw him in a closet and threatened to kill his common-law wife. The infant suffered bruises and small hemorrhages under each eye.

Defence counsel David Lisson said the couple has two children and expecting a third. The children were made temporary wards of the superintendent of child welfare, by consent, after the incident and social workers have counselled the parents, particularly on Smith's drinking problem.

He said the children have been returned to the couple, the drinking problem is under control and Smith has found steady work with the promise of an apprenticeship as a cook.

Both assault offences occurred when Smith had consumed excessive alcohol.

Judge Leslie Cashman noted it was a second offence and particularly that it involved an assault on a child and normally he would have imposed a jail term.

However, considering Smith's age, marital circumstances, the return of the children to the couple, and his efforts to become self-sufficient, the interests of society were served by probation.

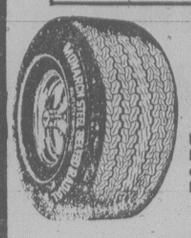

He gave a suspended sentence and put Smith on 12 months probation and required him to report monthly to his probation officer, provide support to his dependents, keep his employment, refrain from drinking to the point where his blood-alcohol level exceeds .08 per cent and to submit to a breathalyzer test upon request.

Eaton's Consumer Tips

What you should know about appliances:

Washers Automatic washers come with a choice of wash and spin speeds: Normal agitation/normal spin, normal agitation/slow spin, and gentle agitation/slow spin. Some washer models can offer up to 5 wash/rinse temperatures — cold/cold, warm/cold, hot/cold, warm/warm, and hot/warm. A smart idea is to use the cold setting on the rinse cycle — it'll save you energy and electrical bills. Better washers have controls that are preset for complete wash cycles. Agitation time, number of rinses and spin cycle lengths are controlled automatically. Preset controls are often available for normal loads, heavy-duty loads, permanent press, knits and delicate items.

Dryers Dryers come in full size, compact and portable sizes for whatever sized home you have. All full-sized models are front loading. As well as drying the clothes, the dryer removes wrinkles. Normal loads require a drying time of about 40 minutes. Most models have a safety door switch that stops the drum from turning when the door is opened. Some models have a strict time control, while others have a dryness sensing control that shuts off the dryer automatically.

Dishwashers The best cleaning job comes from those dishwashers with three level spray action. This consists of spray arms at the top and bottom, and a central turret spray to help clean dishes in the upper rack. Other models have two level spray action — one arm at the top and one at the bottom, or a central turret spray and a spray arm at the bottom. This type of dishwasher does a good job as well. The third type with one spray arm may not always be as efficient.

Queen's aide Russian spy

BLUNT
. . . stripped of knighthood

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament today that Sir Anthony Blunt, a former aide to Queen Elizabeth, has admitted spying for the Soviet Union.

Blunt helped British diplomats Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess to defect to the Soviet Union in 1951, Mrs. Thatcher said.

While working for the British intelligence service, he regularly passed information to the Russians, she told an amazed House of Commons.

And while he was a professor at Cambridge University, he recruited young talent for the Russians, she said.

Blunt, 72, had served as surveyor and then adviser for the Queen's pictures since 1952. A highly distinguished academician, his posts have included professor of art history at the University of London and director of the Courtauld Institute of Art.

Mrs. Thatcher's statement identified Blunt — educated at Marlborough and Trinity College, Cambridge, and regarded as one of the most brilliant men of his generation — as the mysterious "fourth man" in the Burgess-Maclean scandal.

The third man was previously identified as Harold (Kim) Philby, who defected to Moscow in 1963. Philby, too, has been linked with Blunt, Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons.

Speculation has been rife for years on the identity of the academic who recruited clever young men studying at Cambridge University, clearly destined for the higher echelons of the British establishment, and enrolled them as secret agents for the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Thatcher said in her statement:

"In April, 1964, Sir Anthony Blunt admitted to the (British) security authorities that he had been recruited by and had acted as a talent spotter for Russian intelligence before the (Second World) War, when he was a don at Cambridge, and had passed information regularly to the Russians while he was a member of the security service between 1940 and 1945.

"He made this admission after being given an undertaking that he would not be

Some U.S. hostages to be freed: network

Times News Services

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran's foreign minister said today that all hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran except white American males will be freed "very soon," CBS News reported from the Iranian capital.

The network said Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr told CBS correspondent Randy Daniels in an interview that "all women and blacks would be freed very soon."

But Bani Sadr did not say exactly when this will take place, Daniels reported.

Earlier, Iran notified at least two U.S. oil companies that it would no longer sell oil to them and industry analysts said the cutoff apparently applies to all U.S. oil companies.

The action means that U.S. companies will no longer be able to buy Iranian oil for sale to third countries.

President Carter on Tuesday banned the import of Iranian oil to the United States, but the U.S. oil companies had hoped they could continue to take Iranian oil under their contracts and market it outside the U.S.

The Arab League's council of ministers rejected a Libyan demand for joint Arab reprisals against the U.S. for freezing Iranian assets in U.S. banks.

Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Triki told the council the U.S. action was a "very serious provocation" of all the oil-producing countries and called for "immediate and effective counter-measures in solidarity with the Iranian revolution."

Triki did not spell out the political, diplomatic and economic reprisals he had in mind, but presumably they might have included an Arab oil embargo and economic boycott against the U.S. and a break in diplomatic relations.

Iran, which is Moslem but non-Arab, is not a member of the Arab League. But it has called on Moslem countries, particularly the Arab oil producers, to back it in its dispute with the United States over the U.S. embassy seizure in Tehran.

In Washington, the Pentagon anounced Defence Secretary Harold Brown is reviewing the status of 273 Iranian military personnel being trained in the United States as pilots, navigators and mechanics.

In Tehran, students holding the hostages seized a three-member NBC-TV film crew and held them for several hours inside the compound, a spokesman for the students said.

Meanwhile, in other developments:

—The dollar dropped on nearly all major European money markets today.

—The price of gold dropped in both Zurich and London, opening the day at $388 in Zurich after Wednesday's close of $390 and at $387.50 in London.

—Doctors treating the deposed shah in New York believe the exiled monarch could be discharged from hospital in about a week without risking his life. NBC, meanwhile, reported he would be returned to Mexico within 10 days.

Bank rate stunner

LONDON (Reuter) — The Bank of England today raised its minimum lending rate — the interest rate on money loaned to banks — by a stunning three points to a record 17 per cent.

This is two per cent higher than the previous record rate of 15 per cent imposed during the crisis in October, 1976, when the British pound was plunging on foreign exchange markets.

The pound rallied on news of the increase, rising to $2.1333 in U.S. funds from $2.1160.

Firemen suck in acid

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Eight firemen went to hospital early today after they sucked in a mouthful of hydrochloric acid lying in a pocket 60 metres from a derailed tanker leaking chlorine.

The firemen, not wearing gas masks, were examined by a doctor at the site who recommended they go to hospital as a precaution.

A Peel Regional Police spokesman said the winds, which had shifted during the night, were of low velocity and it was improbable the gas would reach Toronto.

Tired and frustrated crews continued to work to patch the tanker, which erupted twice Wednesday, sending hydrochloric acid into the air and workers scrambling.

Evacuation centres were beginning to close as people returned to their homes or moved into hotels paid for by CP Rail, owner of the train.

Meanwhile, there was apparent confusion among CP Rail officials over compensation to evacuees as a result of the mishap.

The railway said Monday that evacuees could go to special claim centres to be reimbursed for out-of-pocket expenses. William Stinson, CP Rail's executive vice-president, said recipients must sign a waiver, freeing the company of future liability.

Company PR officials corrected their boss Wednesday, saying it was a receipt, not a waiver, but a claims manager said the company hadn't decided.

Que. landslide elates Liberals

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Quebec Liberals say they are ready to fight a general election after winning massive majorities in three provincial by-elections Wednesday.

The Liberals won more than 60 per cent of the vote in two ridings formerly held by the Parti Quebecois — Maisonneuve in east-end Montreal and Prevost, north of Momtreal.

They also captured the rural riding of Beauce-Sud, formerly held by Fabien Roy, who jumped to federal politics last year.

Liberals were elated at the victory in Maisonneuve, previously considered the safest PQ seat in Quebec.

Liberal Leader Claude Ryan said he will consider whether to issue a formal call for a general election within the next few days.

In the Beauce-Sud riding, southeast of Quebec City, the Liberal candidate Hermann Mathieu, a 43-year-old notary, won by more than 2,000 votes over industrialist Raymond Boisvert of the PQ.

In Prevost, the Liberals elected broadcaster Solange Chaput-Rolland, a former member of the task force on Canadian unity. She defeated PQ economist Pierre Harvey, a close associate of Premier Levesque.

Liberal organizers attributed their overwhelming victory to the rash of public sector strikes threatening the province and to the government's recently released white paper on sovereignty-association.

The results mean the PQ government has now lost all six by-elections since it was elected in 1976.

Standings in the national assembly now are: PQ 68, Liberals 29, Union Nationale 9, Independents 2, Democrats 1 and one vacant.

Ford car loss may hit $1B

DETROIT (AP) — A top Ford Motor Co. executive is predicting a $1-billion loss on car and truck production in the United States and Canada this year and perhaps next year as well. But he added the No. 2 U.S. automaker is expected to show an over-all profit.

The loss is about what Chrysler Corp. was predicting for its over-all results before the fall sales slump. But Ford executives insist they are not following Chrysler into financial peril.

The prediction was contained in a memo written Nov. 1 by William Bourke, executive vice-president in charge of North American automotive operations. Ford officials confirmed the contents of the memo after it was reported in several publications.

Ford reported a loss of $305 million on North American operations of all kinds for the third quarter. That lumped results from the company's steel, glass, tractor and aerospace businesses and motor vehicle financing in with cars and trucks. Profits overseas and a change in British tax laws enabled Ford to report an over-all profit of $103 million for the quarter.

Where's our preem? Bennett's gone missing

By JAKE BANKY

Lost, stolen or strayed, Premier William Richards Bennett seems to have been mislaid.

On a working holiday "somewhere in California", Bennett has dropped completely out of sight. His own office has no idea how to reach him and Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy is equally in the dark.

In case of an emergency, the premier's staff would have to wait for him to phone in.

"This is not a normal situation. He does not normally go away and not tell us where he is," Nina Gray, Bennett's executive secretary said today.

"It's very difficult to understand," said NDP Leader Dave Barrett, who declined further comment.

Bennett left the energy summit in Ottawa Monday and flew to Los Angeles accompanied only by his secretary Hall Leiren. Tuesday, he attended a lunch at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles given by B.C. Tourism officials. Since then, his exact whereabouts have been unknown.

It is believed the premier is vacationing in Palm Springs, a favorite vacation area for the premier and his late father, former premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Prime Minister Joe Clark had hoped to meet with Bennett in Saskatoon Wednesday to discuss oil prices.

Bennett telephoned his office yesterday morning, but did not say where he could be reached. He was expected to call back yesterday afternoon, but did not. By noon today, the premier had still not phoned back.

Assistant press secretary Jane Burnes says the premier's staff will pass on messages when and if Bennett phones again.

The working holiday is designed to give Bennett time to contemplate his cabinet changes. He is due back in Victoria Wednesday, two days before he announces his new cabinet lineup.

While the premier is in California, the political pot at home continues to boil over, fueled by the continuing "lettergate" scandal. Bennett may be in the sun, but for the moment at least, he is out of the heat.

Meanwhile, the man who says he should bear all the blame for the dirty tricks scandal says he hopes to stay in politics with the Social Credit party.

"I will be discussing my immediate future with Mrs. McCarthy," George Lenko said after submitting his resignation as executive assistant to the human resources minister Wednesday.

"But I intend to continue working in the political field and hopefully for the party."

Lenko, in quitting, accepted full responsibility for the dirty tricks scandal which has rocked the Socreds for close to two months.

McCarthy said she had discussed Lenko's role in the scandal and had been unable to dissuade him from resigning.

She said she had not asked for his resignation and had accepted it "with great regret".

Lenko said his failing was that he was not diligent in scrutinizing tapes on which Socred caucus workers advocated dirty tricks.

"Perhaps I could have taken action, but time and circumstances obscured this judgment and now others are being blamed."

Lenko is the third party worker to quit in the scandal which involved party members using false names in sending letters supporting Social Credit to editors of newspapers before last May's provincial election.

Lenko shouldered all the blame for organizing a seminar last fall at which party researchers Jack Kelly and Ellen MacKay advocated the political dirty tricks.

He said he also prepared tapes of the seminar and distributed them to constituency presidents.

There was no one else involved, Lenko said Wednesday.

The dirty trick campaign is the subject of a province-wide police investigation.

Kelly and Ron Greig, an assistant to Dave Brown, Bennett's communications adviser, have resigned. Miss MacKay refused to accept a one-month suspension and reprimand, arguing her remarks had been authorized by higher party officials. She is back at work after a holiday.

It was the second time Bennett has been out of the country when developments occurred in the scandal.

'Kind of cute' bank robber finally nabbed

MONTREAL (CP) — A young woman believed responsible for eight bank robberies in the last month — including four at branches of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce — was arrested Tuesday in the city's north end, police said.

The 21-year-old woman, described by a police detective as "kind of cute," had been the object of an intense police investigation since the robbery spree began Oct. 15.

Police said she concentrated on the downtown area and only once worked with an accomplice. That partnership ended when her friend turned the wrong way after a raid on a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch and ran smack into a traffic cop.

Power plant 'a slap in face'

HELENA, Mont. (UPC) — Montana state authorities are concerned about an announcement that the Saskatchewan government plans to proceed with construction of the 300-megawatt Coronach power plant six kilometers north of the border.

United States Sen. Max Baucus labelled the decision "a slap in the face to the residents of northeastern Montana who have participated in good faith before the IJC (International Joint Commission) hearings."

"I urge the Saskatchewan Power officials to reconsider this shortsighted and ill-conceived decision," said the senator.

Lieutenant-Governor Ted Schwinden said he understands the Saskatchewan government's duty to "address the energy requirements of its province," but added he will ask the U.S. State Department to "relay the concerns of the state of Montana to the government of Canada."

J.R. Messer, the provincial minister responsible for the Saskatchewan Power Corp., said Wednesday the $170 million project would be started even though the IJC has yet to make public a report it is preparing on the environmental effects of the project.

A 300-megawatt unit already on the same location is slated to begin producing electricity next year.

The state of Montana contends that waste from the plant and a dam at the site will result in higher levels of pollution in the Poplar River, a tiny waterway which flows south toward Scobey, Mont., about 20 kilometers south of the border, and through farm and ranchlands to the southeast.

Haiti immigration smugglers caught

MONTREAL (CP) — The RCMP immigration squad has broken up a ring of Haitians who have been smuggling fellow countrymen, posing as "tourists" in Quebec, across the border into the United States, police said Wednesday.

In a series of raids during the last two days, Mounties said they carried out 10 searches and arrested four Haitians living in the Montreal area.

The network would contact the Haitian tourists when they arrived in Montreal and would drive them to rural points on the Quebec-Maine and Quebec-Vermont borders, leading them on trails into the U.S. They were then taken to New York.

Queen's aide Russian spy

BLUNT
. . . stripped of knighthood

LONDON (Reuter) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament today that Sir Anthony Blunt, a former aide to Queen Elizabeth, has admitted spying for the Soviet Union.

Blunt helped British diplomats Donald Maclean and Guy Burgess to defect to the Soviet Union in 1951, Mrs. Thatcher said.

While working for the British intelligence service, he regularly passed information to the Russians, she told an amazed House of Commons.

And while he was a professor at Cambridge University, he recruited young talent for the Russians, she said.

Blunt, 72, had served as surveyor and then adviser for the Queen's pictures since 1952. A highly distinguished academician, his posts have included professor of art history at the University of London and director of the Courtauld Institute of Art.

Mrs. Thatcher's statement identified Blunt — educated at Marlborough and Trinity College, Cambridge, and regarded as one of the most brilliant men of his generation — as the mysterious "fourth man" in the Burgess-Maclean scandal.

The third man was previously identified as Harold (Kim) Philby, who defected to Moscow in 1963. Philby, too, has been linked with Blunt, Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons.

Speculation has been rife for years on the identity of the academic who recruited clever young men studying at Cambridge University, clearly destined for the higher echelons of the British establishment, and enrolled them as secret agents for the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Thatcher said in her statement:

"In April, 1964, Sir Anthony Blunt admitted to the (British) security authorities that he had been recruited by and had acted as a talent spotter for Russian intelligence before the (Second World) War, when he was a don at Cambridge, and had passed information regularly to the Russians while he was a member of the security service between 1940 and 1945.

"He made this admission after being given an undertaking that he would not be

Some U.S. hostages to be freed: network

Times News Services

NEW YORK (AP) — Iran's foreign minister said today that all hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran except white American males will be freed "very soon," CBS News reported from the Iranian capital.

The network said Foreign Minister Abolhassan Bani Sadr told CBS correspondent Randy Daniels in an interview that "all women and blacks would be freed very soon."

But Bani Sadr did not say exactly when this will take place, Daniels reported.

Earlier, Iran notified at least two U.S. oil companies that it would no longer sell oil to them and industry analysts said the cutoff apparently applies to all U.S. oil companies.

The action means that U.S. companies will no longer be able to buy Iranian oil for sale to third countries.

President Carter on Tuesday banned the import of Iranian oil to the United States, but the U.S. oil companies had hoped they could continue to take Iranian oil under their contracts and market it outside the U.S.

The Arab League's council of ministers rejected a Libyan demand for joint Arab reprisals against the U.S. for freezing Iranian assets in U.S. banks.

Libyan Foreign Minister Ali Triki told the council the U.S. action was a "very serious provocation" of all the oil-producing countries and called for "immediate and effective counter-measures in solidarity with the Iranian revolution."

Triki did not spell out the political, diplomatic and economic reprisals he had in mind, but presumably they might have included an Arab oil embargo and economic boycott against the U.S. and a break in diplomatic relations.

Iran, which is Moslem but non-Arab, is not a member of the Arab League. But it has called on Moslem countries, particularly the Arab oil producers, to back it in its dispute with the United States over the U.S. embassy seizure in Tehran.

In Washington, the Pentagon anounced Defence Secretary Harold Brown is reviewing the status of 273 Iranian military personnel being trained in the United States as pilots, navigators and mechanics.

In Tehran, students holding the hostages seized a three-member NBC-TV film crew and held them for several hours inside the compound, a spokesman for the students said.

Meanwhile, in other developments:

—The dollar dropped on nearly all major European money markets today.

—The price of gold dropped in both Zurich and London, opening the day at $388 in Zurich after Wednesday's close of $390 and at $387.50 in London.

—Doctors treating the deposed shah in New York believe the exiled monarch could be discharged from hospital in about a week without risking his life. NBC, meanwhile, reported he would be returned to Mexico within 10 days.

Bank rate stunner

LONDON (Reuter) — The Bank of England today raised its minimum lending rate — the interest rate on money loaned to banks — by a stunning three points to a record 17 per cent.

This is two per cent higher than the previous record rate of 15 per cent imposed during the crisis in October, 1976, when the British pound was plunging on foreign exchange markets.

The pound rallied on news of the increase, rising to $2.1333 in U.S. funds from $2.1160.

Danger from gas still high

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The risk that significant amounts of dangerous chlorine could burst from a derailed tank car increeased Thursday, keeping up to 100,000 people from their evacuated homes for at least a fifth night.

Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said hazards involved in removing the chemical made it imperative that 40 square kilometres around the derailment site stayed tightly sealed until at least late today.

He said he had no firm indication when the evacuees, the remainder of a group of 223,000 moved from their homes Sunday, would be able to return.

Traces of chlorine blew east toward Toronto all day Thursday and it was feared that tricky drainage operations might send huge bursts of the gas toward populated areas.

No further attempts would be made to empty the tanker — emitting chlorine since a CP Rail train derailed late Saturday — until winds started blowing south toward Lake Ontario.

There is nothing directly south of the train wreck but evacuated homes and the lake.

Officials fear a layer of ice — 15 to 30 centimetres thick — that has formed on the surface of the liquid could collapse, creating greater pressure inside the tank.

If that happened, the pressure could blow large amounts of chlorine though a gash in the wrecked tanker that has been lightly covered with a temporary patch.

Que. landslide elates Liberals

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Quebec Liberals say they are ready to fight a general election after winning massive majorities in three provincial by-elections Wednesday.

The Liberals won more than 60 per cent of the vote in two ridings formerly held by the Parti Quebecois — Maisonneuve in east-end Montreal and Prevost, north of Momtreal.

They also captured the rural riding of Beauce-Sud, formerly held by Fabien Roy, who jumped to federal politics last year.

Liberals were elated at the victory in Maisonneuve, previously considered the safest PQ seat in Quebec.

Liberal Leader Claude Ryan said he will consider whether to issue a formal call for a general election within the next few days.

In the Beauce-Sud riding, southeast of Quebec City, the Liberal candidate Hermann Mathieu, a 43-year-old notary, won by more than 2,000 votes over industrialist Raymond Boisvert of the PQ.

In Prevost, the Liberals elected broadcaster Solange Chaput-Rolland, a former member of the task force on Canadian unity. She defeated PQ economist Pierre Harvey, a close associate of Premier Levesque.

Liberal organizers attributed their overwhelming victory to the rash of public sector strikes threatening the province and to the government's recently released white paper on sovereignty-association.

The results mean the PQ government has now lost all six by-elections since it was elected in 1976.

Standings in the national assembly now are: PQ 68, Liberals 29, Union Nationale 9, Independents 2, Democrats 1 and one vacant.

Still no word on oil price

SASKATOON (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed talked about oil prices for three hours in a motel Wednesday, but the talks were inconclusive, with neither leader willing to say if any accord had been reached.

Ford car loss may hit $1B

DETROIT (AP) — A top Ford Motor Co. executive is predicting a $1-billion loss on car and truck production in the United States and Canada this year and perhaps next year as well. But he added the No. 2 U.S. automaker is expected to show an over-all profit.

The loss is about what Chrysler Corp. was predicting for its over-all results before the fall sales slump. But Ford executives insist they are not following Chrysler into financial peril.

The prediction was contained in a memo written Nov. 1 by William Bourke, executive vice-president in charge of North American automotive operations. Ford officials confirmed the contents of the memo after it was reported in several publications.

Ford reported a loss of $305 million on North American operations of all kinds for the third quarter. That lumped results from the company's steel, glass, tractor and aerospace businesses and motor vehicle financing in with cars and trucks. Profits overseas and a change in British tax laws enabled Ford to report an over-all profit of $103 million for the quarter.

Where's our preem? Bennett's gone missing

By JAKE BANKY

Lost, stolen or strayed, Premier William Richards Bennett seems to have been mislaid.

On a working holiday "somewhere in California," Bennett has dropped completely out of sight. His own office has no idea how to reach him and Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy is equally in the dark.

In case of an emergency, the premier's staff would have to wait for him to phone in.

"This is not a normal situation. He does not normally go away and not tell us where he is," Nina Gray, Bennett's executive secretary said today.

"It's very difficult to understand," said NDP Leader Dave Barrett, who declined further comment.

Bennett left the energy summit in Ottawa Monday and flew to Los Angeles accompanied only by his secretary Hall Leiren. Tuesday, he attended a lunch at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles given by B.C. Tourism officials. Since then, his exact whereabouts have been unknown.

Prime Minister Joe Clark had hoped to meet with Bennett in Saskatoon Wednesday to discuss oil prices.

Bennett telephoned his office yesterday morning, but did not say where he could be reached. He was expected to call back yesterday afternoon, but did not. By noon today, the premier had still not phoned back.

Assistant press secretary Jane Burnes says the premier's staff will pass on messages when and if Bennett phones again.

The working holiday is designed to give Bennett time to contemplate his cabinet changes. He is due back in Victoria Wednesday, two days before he announces his new cabinet lineup.

While the premier is in California, the political pot at home continues to boil over, fueled by the continuing "lettergate" scandal. Bennett may be in the sun, but for the moment at least, he is out of the heat.

Meanwhile, the man who says he should bear all the blame for the dirty tricks scandal says he hopes to stay in politics with the Social Credit party.

"I will be discussing my immediate future with Mrs. McCarthy," George Lenko said after submitting his resignation as executive assistant to the human resources minister Wednesday.

"But I intend to continue working in the political field and hopefully for the party."

Lenko, in quitting, accepted full responsibility for the dirty tricks scandal which has rocked the Socreds for close to two months.

McCarthy said she had discussed Lenko's role in the scandal and had been unable to dissuade him from resigning.

She said she had not asked for his resignation and had accepted it "with great regret".

Lenko said his failing was that he was not diligent in scrutinizing tapes on which Socred caucus workers advocated dirty tricks.

"Perhaps I could have taken action, but time and circumstances obscured this judgment and now others are being blamed."

Lenko is the third party worker to quit in the scandal which involved party members using false names in sending letters supporting Social Credit to editors of newspapers before last May's provincial election.

Lenko shouldered all the blame for organizing a seminar last fall at which party researchers Jack Kelly and Ellen MacKay advocated the political dirty tricks.

He said he also prepared tapes of the seminar and distributed them to constituency presidents.

There was no one else involved, Lenko said Wednesday.

The dirty trick campaign is the subject of a province-wide police investigation.

Kelly and Ron Greig, an assistant to Dave Brown, Bennett's communications adviser, have resigned. Miss MacKay refused to accept a one-month suspension and reprimand, arguing her remarks had been authorized by higher party officials. She is back at work after a holiday.

It was the second time Bennett has been out of the country when developments occurred in the scandal.
